

Survey Of Historical Properties

North Carolina's historical assets — in the form of old homes, churches, business buildings, bridges, cemeteries and other properties — are being surveyed and documented by a long-range project within the Department of Art, Culture and History.

Preliminary research already has been done on about 2,000 individual properties, and a more extensive study has been completed on approximately 500. Two hundred thirty-seven North Carolina properties have been listed on the National Register of Historic Places or are awaiting final approval.

The "National Register" is a federal listing set up by the Department of the Interior as a "roll call of the tangible reminders of the history of the United States." Properties are listed on the basis of their historical or architectural significance, and ownership is not affected.

A limited degree of protection is provided in that any federally funded project that would alter or destroy a listed site must be reviewed by the federal government and its importance considered. In addition, a law passed by the General Assembly in 1971 also requires a review by the North Carolina Advisory Council on Historic Preservation when any state-funded or state-licensed project endangers a property on the National Register.

In attempting to record for future generations a broad overview of the state's history without undue emphasis on the finer plantation homes and mansions, a wide variety of properties have been listed. Representative of the diversification are the Capitol Building in Raleigh, the old Wilkes County Jail where Tom Dula was held for a time, the Cupola House at Edenton, a cotton church in Trenton, a cotton press in Tarboro, and a turn-of-the-century railroad depot in Hamlet.

The ultimate goal of the survey is to document the significance of every historic property in the state.

Bruce MacDougal, who heads the state's historic survey staff of six persons, emphasizes that local people will play a large role in determining the project's success. Without their interest and cooperation in calling attention to significant properties in their areas, the task would be much more difficult.

Rep. Holshouser Will Speak Here On August 31st

Rep. Jim Holshouser, Republican candidate for Governor, has announced that he would conduct a whirlwind 10-day tour of 46 counties in eastern North Carolina.

The four-term legislator will speak on the courthouse steps in Hertford on Aug. 31st at 11:00 a.m.

Holshouser said that the east, "like a lot of ladies, has been wooed by almost all of the candidates for Governor, and all too often, has been left in the lurch by elected Governors."

"As I hope all North Carolinians know, I have always kept my promises. This is one of the messages I plan to carry to Eastern North Carolina," he continued.

Holshouser said that during the tour he plans to "talk a little and listen a lot."

The tour will begin in Raleigh on August 24 and will conclude in Oxford on September 2.

JESSE HELMS: A CITIZEN-SENATOR

"Jesse Helms is not one of your back-slapping, hand-wringing, affable garden variety political office seekers." — Virginian Pilot 7/27/72

Dr. Daniel M. Lotz, the former UNC basketball star and son-in-law of evangelist Billy Graham, recently wrote about Jesse Helms that he had devoted a lifetime of witnessing his faith in America — "and not by words alone."

Jesse Helms, Dr. Lotz pointed out, was the prime mover in establishing Camp Willow Run, a youth camp for Christ in Littleton. The Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge has given him two awards. The Southern Baptist Convention honored him this year with its Abe Lincoln Award because of his work for crippled children.

Jesse Helms is that kind of man. Working. Doing. Getting things done, not just talking about the problem.

All his life, Jesse Helms has worked to make things better than he found them. We need a man like that in Washington. As Dr. Lotz put it: "A man with the Christian strengths possessed by Jesse Helms is the kind of man we need to elect and support."

YES, I believe in Jesse Helms and I want to help elect him as our Citizen-Senator. I'm enclosing my contribution of:
