Mrs. M.B. Taylor To Restoration Association Receive Distinguished Launches Fund Drive. Service Award

selected to serve as a regional chairman for the White House Conference on Aging. She was also invited to attend the National White House Conference on Aging in Washington, D.C.

More than 375 persons attended the region R meeting and an additional 550 persons were reached in five community forums.

Locally, Mrs. Taylor organized an active "telephone reassurance" program and did a radio series called called "Tips For The Senior Citizen."

In the field of nutrition, Mrs. Taylor has worked closely with Perquimans County schools in a Better Breakfast and a Drink Milk campaign. She has held nutrition workshops for low-income families, held a series of nutrition classes for employees of nursing homes and boarding schools, and conducted a weight control program for 85 over weight women.

"Mrs. Taylor has an unusual ability to involve, not only her extension groups, but other related agencies and organizations as she plans and carries out her programs," according to Dr. Eloise Cofer, assistant director, of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

The Perquimans agent is active in numerous professional societies including The North Carolina and American Home Economics Associations; National Council on Family Relations; Adult Education Association, U.S.A.; North Carolina Family Life Council; North Carolina Consumer Council; North Carolina and National Extension Agents Associations; and Epsilon Sigma Phi, honorary extension fraternity.

The distinguished service awards will be presented at a special recognition breakfast.

Lions Club To Sponsor Sale

The Hertford Lions Club will sponsor a door to door light bulb sale Monday night, September 25th.

The area significance of the Perquimans County Restoration Association, Inc.; Mrs. J.B. Alderman, outgoing president of the Pasquotank Historical Association; and John E. (Jack) Tyler, president of the North Carolina Society for the Preservation of Antiquities; who were among others from the surrounding area. They along with local residents of Perquimans County and the towns of Hertford and Winfall heard Jack Tyler stress the importance of grass support for the project at all levels. First in helping to raise the matching funds—$17,500 to match $37,500, and then to operate the project as an added major tourist attraction in the area, as Restoration is big business now days.

Tyler further stated that already a fine sense of proportion and technical "know-how" was being exhibited in the planning of a project that would both preserve the past in the Newbold-White House and teach in a unique way construction methods of a vanished era in the Theophilus White House.

The evening closed with the showing by Tyler of color slides on the Hope Foundation project in Bertie County—the Governor Stone House Restoration—with comments on some of the problems encountered and how they were handled.

Mrs. Minnie B. Taylor, Hertford, will receive a distinguished service award at the National Association of Extension Home Economists annual meeting in Denver, Colo., Oct. 10-13.

On the extension staff in Perquimans County for 22 years, Mrs. Taylor will be cited for her "ability to motivate and organize people for action, job to be done."

Mrs. Taylor's leadership is exemplified in the direction and concern she has given to the county's aging and nutrition programs.

For example, in 1971, Mrs. Taylor was the only county Extension agent in the state

Former Hertford Resident Retires From D.C. School System

Mrs. Lillian Elliott Highe, who spent her childhood years in Hertford, and who graduated from Hertford High School, was a happy retiree among about three hundred retirees from the District of Columbia School System in June, 1972.

Mrs. Highe began her teaching career in the public schools of North Carolina before joining the District of Columbia School System where she had a successful and fascinating career for twenty-one years. During her tenure she served as a classroom teacher five years and then was promoted to the Reading Clinic where she served as a clinician and diagnostician sixteen years. In 1971, she was city's first reading specialist to be reclassified and receive The Board Order as a Reading Consultant, having met all qualifications for reclassification approved by The Board of Education.

During Mrs. Highe's career she says it was perfectly fascinating when she worked in a team approach with cross-disciplines—clinical psychologists, social workers, counselors, principals reading supervisors, teachers, and parents to remediate or reorganize a child's learning program. Some of her other most delightful assignments were working with professional teams or committees such as the Innovation Team that designed a Federal City College Reading Project, a program that proposed to advance high school students' reading techniques prior to college entrance; the Qualifications Committee that worked with the central Administration to establish reading standards for specialized reading personnel to comply with the International-Reading Association's standards and city needs; the committee to reorganize the reading behavioral objectives for elementary and junior high schools; and serving as a consultant with the TTT (Teachers of Teachers of Teachers) Project to design a professional reading course for the District of Columbia Teachers College. This course "The development of Behavioral Objectives in Elementary School Reading" is one of the graduate courses that Mrs. Highe teaches for D.C. Teachers College. Other fascinating experiences were establishing Reading Diagnostic Centers in various areas of the city that became the area's hub for diagnostic practices, reading demonstrations, and in-service training for diagnostic practices; serving as an Assistant Reading Supervisor to the Howard University Reading Laboratory School; and serving as a Reading Consultant to an Oral Language Development Project at Junior Village - the home for exceptional children.

Mrs. Highe is an alumna of State Teachers College in Elizabeth City, North Carolina, and Teachers College - Columbia University in New York City, New York. She further studied in the advanced field of Psychological Foundations-Reading Specialization in Columbia University in New York City, Syracuse University in Syracuse, New York, and Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

Joint Cancer Crusade Banquet

Dr. H. Max Schiebel, a prominent Durham surgeon and Cancer Society official, will be the guest speaker at a joint kickoff banquet for the Cancer Crusade in Perquimans and Chowan Counties. The banquet will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, September 21, at the Edenton Jaycee Building.

October is Crusade month for Perquimans and Chowan and a goal of $1,500 has been set for the Perquimans Unit - states Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, president. Mrs. Marion Thrower, president for Chowan, announce a $3,500 goal.

Dr. Schiebel is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University. He is affiliated with Duke Hospital, Watts and Lincoln Hospital and consultant at Dorothy Dix Hospital. He is a past president of the North Carolina division of the American Cancer Society, a member of the Board of Directors and serving as chairman of the Governor's Cancer Commission.

J. Jordan Bonner Speaks On Busing

Now that schools have opened again, J. Jordan Bonner, Republican Candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives from the First Congressional District is being asked about his stand on busing. He is therefore issuing the following press release:

"I am against busing to achieve forced integration. Every so-called conservative politician says that he is against busing in order to achieve racial balance. This is, of course, only a political escape phrase. The truth of the matter is that no court has ordered busing to achieve racial balance. Busing has been ordered for purposes of desegregation, and there is an important legal difference. Desegregation is an effort to eliminate essentially one-race schools; racial balancing is an effort to establish a racial quota at every school.

The real issue is whether the courts have the power to dictate to the people, and why Congressmen have not taken any real positive steps to check their actions. I am against forced integration. I am against the court ruling that freedom of choice is unconstitutional. When freedom of choice is lost, freedom itself is lost. It is time the people take positive action to preserve their freedoms. I am for a return to freedom of choice and the neighborhood school concept.

It seems that the Supreme Court is taking over more and more things, and I think this is wrong. Somehow or other, this country is heading toward socialism and dictatorship and away from democracy.

The courts have used the Blacks people in this country to achieve their socialistic goals, and have stripped them of their identity as a people. It is an insult to tell a black child he can learn only when he is surrounded by whites. Blacks should have the same opportunity to attend quality, well-financed schools of their own choice.

Busing, to achieve forced integration, is not the answer to this nation's educational problems. We must develop highly qualified teachers, build modern schools in more neighborhoods. Citizens should have an unqualified right to reap the full benefits of the community in which they live."

Rites Held For Alvin F. Jordan

Alvin Franklin Jordan, 72, a retired cabinet maker of 414 Mowbray Arch, Norfolk, Va., died Thursday at 7:00 P.M. in Lake Taylor City Hospital, Norfolk following a long illness.
