Local Resident Participates In COA Field Trip

"What does a shark feel like?"

"I've heard that plankton is important to life in both the sea and land-but what is plankton and what does it look like?"

Some who live in the Albemarle area may never care to know the answer to the above questions about the nearby sea. And those who wondered usually have to do a lot of reading to answer their questions. Yet recently members of a Biology 103 course at the College of The Albemarle, while on a field trip and later in the laboratory, had a chance to have their curiosity satisfied first hand.

Around eight o'clock on a recent Monday morning, Assistant Professor Dan Sasser and about a half dozen members of the class boarded the blue COA Club Wagon and headed for the coast. About an hour later, they entered the Cape Hatteras National Seashore Park. Not many miles later, they stopped along the roadside to take a good look at the animal and plant life that were native to the seashore region. With binoculars they soon spotted several kinds of waterfowl, while only a few feet from the road they discovered several unique bushes, reeds, and shrubs.

Further on down the highway, however, they visited a special area that was maintained by the Park Service as a nature trail.

In other business, the Board voted to employ Tom Bateman to repair the roof of the cafeteria and the gymnasium at Perquimans Union School.

The Board voted to replace tools in the approximate amount of $380.00 which were stolen from the garage.
