

Your Social Security

Under a change in the social security law, monthly benefits can be paid to adults who were severely disabled before age 22, starting in January.

Previously, "childhood disability" payments could be made only to qualified adults who were severely disabled before age 18.

Monthly payments are made to severely disabled adult sons and daughters of workers getting retirement or disability benefits from social security — and of deceased workers whose families get social security survivors benefits.

The new law extends the age for qualifying, because people who become severely disabled between 18 and 22 — like those disabled when younger — generally haven't had the chance to work long enough under social security to get disability benefits on their own work records.

If they become able to work, their social security payments stop. But if they become disabled again within 7 years of the time they became able to work, the new law provides that payments can be resumed.

About 13,000 people will be newly eligible for about $1.4 million a month in benefits under the new law.

Social security now pays $30 million a month to 300,000 people 18 and over who were severely disabled in childhood.

Toys Of The Past

"Toys of the Past" highlight this year's traditional Christmas exhibit at the North Carolina Museum of History in Raleigh.

Located on the museum's second floor, the Christmas exhibit features many toys that delighted children in North Carolina at this time of year fifty to a hundred years ago.

Set among holiday decorations amidst the sounds of familiar Christmas carols, the exhibit includes late nineteenth century dolls, children's building blocks, and several toy trains — both wind-up and electric.

Other items from Christmases past are a small cast iron stove that no doubt brought many hours of pleasure to a little girl who probably is a grandmother today. From some fortunate little boy's toy chest, there is a working scale model of a powerful steam engine.

In the days before television, a type of slide projector called a "magic lantern" operated on one candle power and provided entertainment and fascination for the whole family. An early twentieth century board game called "Phoebe Snow" was a forerunner of many similar games popular today.

Other unique items on display include a toy, horse-drawn fire truck; a two-wheeled cart pulled by a wooden horse with mechanical legs; and a small bag overflowing with someone's treasured marbles — all from another era in North Carolina history.

In addition to the toys, a hand-carved nativity scene done in 1950 by students at the John C. Campbell Folk School in Clay County is featured. The exhibit can be seen through December 30, though visitors should note that the museum will be closed for the holidays on December 23, 24, 25 and 26 and on January 1.

Located at 100 East Jones Street in Raleigh, the North Carolina Museum of History offers exhibits on the state's past from "Stone Age to Space Age." It is normally open to the public free of charge from 9:30 to 5:30 Monday through Saturday and from 2:00 to 5:00 on Sundays.

New Program At COA

The Dean of Student Services at College of The Albemarle announced today that a new program known as the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) has been recently approved by the faculty. CLEP is designed primarily to serve the non-traditional student who has acquired knowledge through correspondence and extension courses, educational television, adult education programs, on-the-job training, and independent study. It enables students who have been enrolled for one quarter at the college to demonstrate their knowledge and validate their learning by receiving college credit on the basis of subject examinations.

Any COA student who believes that he is sufficiently knowledgeable in a specific course or courses, and who has earned twelve (12) credit hours with a 2.0 ("C") quality point average or better may contact the Dean of Student Services, John Simmons, for additional information.

Bridge Club Meets

Mrs. G.W. Barbee entertained her bridge club Tuesday night at her home on Grubb Street. Players included Mrs. J.T. Biggers, Mrs. W.C. Dozier, Mrs. H.C. Stokes, Mrs. John Coston, Mrs. T.L. Jessup, Mrs. C.R. Holmes, Miss Mary Sumner, and Miss Ruby White. Mrs. Dozier won the high score prize. A sweet course was served.

When people asked the eccentric ancient Greek philosopher Diogenes — as he knew they would — why he carried a lantern in broad daylight, he answered, "I am seeking an honest man."

From all of us to all of you, for a happy Yule!
