Kitchens Can Be Made Efficient, Attractive

Nine homemakers in Rockingham County recently discovered that their kitchens could be turned into efficient and attractive rooms that would suit the needs of their particular families.

The nine women were participants in a one-day kitchen planning clinic conducted by the Agricultural Extension Service.

During the session they took a look at the types of activities carried out in a kitchen area, kitchen arrangements and space and storage requirements.

Cabinets and cabinet tops, wall and flooring materials and new innovations in appliances were also studied.

The session ended with individual consultations in which each homemaker re-drew her own kitchen plans to make a better kitchen.

"Everyone seemed to profit from the workshop," added Mrs. Joyce Hildreth, home economics extension agent.

OLD FAVORITE
The revised interest in stretching the meat dollar, reminded one Wake County homemaker of the meat rationing days of World War II, and a bean recipe her family had liked.

So the woman called Associate Extension

Home Economics Agent Betty Cook to "find out if the recipe was still around."

Mrs. Cook dug through some old files and found a cookbook put out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in 1943. And there it was: a recipe for Pinto Bean Loaf.

"Several persons have tried the old recipe," Mrs. Cook added, "And, they like it."

BULLETIN BOARD
Making your own bulletin board is half the fun. Having a place to put your photographs and clippings is the other half.

So, Bonnie Phillips and Awanda James, Tabor City, Rt. 2, are showing other teenagers how to make bulletin boards similar to the ones they made in a 4-H project.

"The boards were made from leftover pieces of plywood, later covered with fabric," explains Mrs. Elaine Blake, home economics extension agent, Columbus County.

Bonnie and Awanda agree that having a bulletin board is just the first step. "The next step," they point out, "is to form the good habit of putting things away."

By Marion Swindell

One of the captive followers of the Duke of Monmouth was brought before James the Second. "You know it is in my power," said the king, "to pardon you." "Yes," said the man, who knew his cruel character, "but it is not in your nature." In thinking about the state of the world today, we can easily realize that it has become so as a result of the nature the world has chosen. This trait carries over into all individuals. They mistrust, hate and despise because it is in their nature. People love and trust, too, because it is in their nature. Think of the ten best people you have ever known, and think of their nature. Is it not one of complete trust, love and faith in their fellowman? If the world is to become a better place, it will become so within the hearts of individuals. One at a time — the changes will be made, and mankind will be saved. So, just how important is every living human to a better world ... a better country ... a better community ... a better home?

A new Sunday School project proposing an annual age division emphasis was introduced recently at Ridgecrest Baptist Conference Center by the Sunday School department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board.

From October, 1973, to September, 1974, the Children's Division of Sunday School will be highlighted as the beginning of the new Sunday School department emphasis.

Persons attending Sunday School Leadership Week at Ridgecrest Conference Center viewed a twenty minute multimedia presentation explaining major points of the project and how it could strengthen Bible teaching in children's departments in the churches represented.

This emphasis is to give special support and recognition to Sunday School age divisions at regular intervals. Adults will be spotlighted in the 1974-1975 year.

Children from six to eleven years old, grades one through six, compose the one and one-half million enrolled in the Children's Division of Sunday School. Work in this emphasis will be done primarily by the children's section of the Sunday School department. Robert G. Fulbright is supervisor of the section. Periodical support, special field service projects, promotional items and general support from the entire Sunday School department will be combined for each emphasis.

In addition to the on-going program of Children's Sunday School work, four quarterly emphases will be promoted during the 1973-74 year.

These promotional emphases will be supported in the Children's Division curriculum materials and through all field service projects during the year.

The first quarterly emphasis, from October to December, 1973, will be on Bible-based children's curriculum materials. Churches will be encouraged to present a Promotion Day Bible to each child entering the Children's Division the first Sunday in October.

Key Bible verses used in the curriculum materials are carried in the Bible plus maps, traits of Christian character, and a section on becoming a Christian. Published by Broadman Press, the Bibles are available now in Baptist Book Stores.

Perfect attendance in each of the Children's departments will be the emphasis in the second quarter, with special recognition being given each child with perfect attendance.

Curriculum material will undergird this emphasis with a special "Learning Is Fun" section in each pupil's book. "More" and "Adventure" will carry an attendance check for each child to record his attendance.

A church-home emphasis will highlight the April to June quarter, encouraging stronger ties between the church and home.

The first quarterly emphasis, from October to December, 1973, will be on Bible-based children's curriculum materials. Churches will be encouraged to present a Promotion Day Bible to each child entering the Children's Division the first Sunday in October.

Worker appreciation will conclude the quarterly emphases for the year. Various ways will be suggested in "Children's Leadership" and "Outreach" for the church to express appreciation for worker with children in Sunday School.

Included in the field service support activities are a multimedia presentation for seminary students, seminary guest lecturers, and five regional Child Life Conferences. "Teaching Children the Bible," is the title of the 15-20 minute multimedia presentation, which is designed to deepen appreciation for Bible teaching with children. The Children's section will present this in chapel at the six seminars in the fall of 1973.

Guest lecturers from the Children's section of the Sunday School department will be available to the seminaries for appropriate religious education and theology classes the day of the multimedia presentation.

The purpose of the Child Life Conferences is to train experienced workers to assist states and associations in on-going Children's work. The Southeastern Child Life Conference will be held in Lake Yale, Fla., March 25-27, 1974; Eastern Child Life Conference, Eagle Eyrie, Va., April 22-25, 1974.
