The Albemarle Chemical Co. has been serving farmers in the area since 1965 and since that time "our growth has been steady," said General Manager Marvin Caddy.

Known to his many friends as "Red" he explains the reason for his company's success: "Easy! It's based on our service and products."

The latter includes such names as Central Soya and Ralston Purina feeds.

SELECT A SLOGAN — The Travel and Promotion Division announced today that their slogan contest is showing all the signs of being one of the most successful projects ever conducted by the Division.

Travel and Promotion Director Jim Hastings said he is extremely pleased with the number of entries. "After only two ads in the newspapers, we have about 600 slogans on over 450 entries," Hastings pointed out.

The contest started July 15 and will end August 31. Purpose of the project is to select a new travel slogan for the State's vacation opportunities.

Winner of the contest will receive a week's vacation in any one of the state's three areas—coast, Piedmont, or mountains. The vacation will be donated by members of the travel industry.

Travel and Promotion Division staff member Kay Cruse is shown with the pile of entries for the new North Carolina travel slogan.

Coaches Warned Of Over Heating

High school football practice begins around August 7 over most of the State. And with the heat and humidity still at summer heights, high school football coaches and trainers are urged to be on the lookout for signs of heat illness in their players.

"With football practice starting at the height of summer temperatures," says Al Proctor, Coordinator of Sports Medicine for the Department of Public Instruction, "it is essential to provide gradual conditioning to hot weather activity and to watch carefully for signs of lethargy, inattention, stupor, awkwardness, or unusual fatigue in players."

Proctor notes that one of the most common heat illnesses is the heat stroke, which occurs when the body loses the ability to sweat. "We don't know all the causes of heat stroke," says Proctor, "but it is believed that lack of acclimation to extreme heat and humidity has as much to do with it as anything."

What can a coach do to protect his athletes from heat illnesses? "We are offering several suggestions to coaches across the State," says Proctor.

"First, a coach should require a careful medical history and physical examination on each player before allowing him to practice. Workouts should be scheduled during the cooler morning and early evening hours and players should be acclimated to the heat by graduated practice schedules. Proctor adds that players should also have rest periods of 15 to 20 minutes during workouts of an hour or more.

According to Proctor, the clothing worn during practice can make a big difference. Schools should provide clothing that is white to reflect heat, and brief, loose, and comfortable to permit heat escape. Clothing should also be permeable to allow heat loss by sweat evaporation.

BEAUFORT — Morehead City...A group of people interested in doing something for children during the summer got together here and formed again this year the Carteret County Summer School for Children. The program is unique in that it is not sponsored by any government or private education unit.

It started as a parent movement and is still pretty much the same.

Children had the opportunity to sign up for six three-hour sessions on either birds, insects, seashells, beginning or intermediate seashore life. A lot of the sessions were outside in the field looking around, seeing what the kids could find and why they found it where they did. Ecology.

Teachers were volunteers with qualifications from their profession, hobby, or interests. They were paid a nominal salary. But one probably spoke for all, "it was a good excuse to get outside."

The program was organized in the late 1950's by a group of Carteret parents, primarily scientifically-oriented. It continued through the years until the late 1960's when a federally funded marine science program came to the county and more or less took it over. When that program expired in 1971, concerned parents got together and said let's see if we do it again, according to Dr. Sandra Woods, program director.

The program was not active last summer, but this summer 73 students were enrolled. Dr. Woods was encouraged with the results and has big ideas for the future. She would like to see enrollment mushroom and emphasis expand into other areas, such as botany, and see the summer school have permanent classrooms and equipment.

The program's board of director is composed of scientific people from the community Government and university laboratories where they are employed.
