Next Week Hearing Will Affect Forestry

"One of the things that may have a far reaching affect on forestry will take place in Washington, N. C. next week," according to Perquimans County Forest Ranger Lewis Stallings. "It's a hearing by the Forest Practices Study Committee at the Agricultural Building on 2nd Street on Thursday, September 12."

"The committee was created by the last session of the General Assembly to look at the possible need for regulating forest practices and to make recommendations to the 1975 General Assembly on what to do," Stallings said. The committee is seeking information from the woodland owners, loggers, sawmill operators, and the public in general about what forest practices or operations they feel need regulation.

Stallings said that forest practices are such things as harvesting trees (clear-cutting, selective cutting, and thinning), building logging roads, the use of fire as a forest management tool, use of chemicals in forestry, and the methods used to prepare land for tree planting. The committee is also interested in the effects of forest practices on a community's economy, tax base, and labor market; and upon wildlife habitat and recreation.

According to Stallings, the committee is not proposing any regulations at this time, but simply trying to find out from the people what effects forest practices are having upon them, and do they think such practices need to be regulated by law. Stallings said, "The committee has to know how the people feel about these things and what affect these practices have on them. They also need to know how any possible regulation would affect the landowner, loggers, and others in order to make a sound recommendation."

Stallings pointed out that the committee, 11 men appointed by James E. Harrington, Secretary of Natural and Economic Resources, has to complete its study and send its report to Harrington with its recommendations by the first of December. The committee has held two public hearings so far: one in Lexington on August 8 and the second in Asheville on August 22. The last hearing will be in Fayetteville on October 10.

Stallings said that people who are not able to attend any of the hearings, but wish to make their opinions and views known to the committee, can do so in writing. Just send the letter to the Forest Practices Study Committee, Post Office Box 27687, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

CITIZENS DAY

Citizens Day will be held in Raleigh this year at the State Fair Grounds. Beginning at 2 p.m. The guest speaker for the event will be Rufus L. Edmister, Candidate for Attorney General. —The fund raising event will cost the unbelievable price of 99 cents.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt is trying to encourage all of the counties to participate in the events and hopes that the funds will help support the Democratic party and draw the democrats closer together. For transportation to the Citizens Day please contact Joe Nowell, county Chairman.

LABOR DAY GUESTS

Levune Jordan had weekend visitors for the Labor Day from Pasadena, Texas, his father Clement Jordan and sister Marie Jordan.

VISITHERE

Mr. and Mrs. L.J. Sitterson of Va. Beach spent the weekend with his brother, Mr. and Mrs. L.B. Sitterson of Hertford.

WE JUST BUILT A RAILROAD

(You can say we're here to stay)

The last rails have been laid that links the railroad from Perdue's feed mill in Salisbury, Maryland to our feed mill site at Cofield, North Carolina. Now, 240 tons of Perdue's specially mixed feed will ride these rails each week to feed the 480,000 Perdue broilers currently in the R-C area. Feed can now be stored in one of three feed tanks to be trucked out to your neighbors that are Perdue broiler growers. The construction thus far represents an investment by Perdue of more than $400,000. We are now building the feed mill so that feed can be manufactured at Cofield. So, in the meantime we wanted to protect our investment (chickens) by having feed readily available to haul to our growers in our area when they needed it.

You can protect your future by growing broilers that offer a guaranteed income (see box).

Minimum Guarantee For 4 Years	Average Payment For 4 Years
$35,200 (For 22 Flocks)	$42,169 (For 22 Flocks)

Many of your neighbors have done just this! They protect their incomes from inflation by increasing their incomes with "chicken money". Investments in crops and real estate are protected by a guaranteed year round income from broilers.

So you can receive Perdue checks by growing Perdue chicks.
