

Women Helping Women

By KATHY NEWBERN

"Women helping women" was a phrase heard often by the approximately 200 women attending a meeting of the eastern area of the N.C. Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs Oct. 12-13. The meeting of the 33 eastern area BPW clubs was held at the Ramade Inn in New Bern, N.C.

Hulda Wood, Billie Sloop and Kathy Newbern attended the Saturday session of the meeting representing the Hertford BPW club. Ms. Wood is the president of the local chapter.

The local BPW members attended the three workshops held on Saturday. Membership was the subject of the first workshop headed by Kay Graybeal of Goldsboro, State BPW Membership Chairman. She pointed out that there are 3,619 far heel women involved in BPW and the state boasts a total of six new clubs this year. Ms. Graybeal gave the workshop participants six pointers on how to recruit new members and retain existing ones.

The second workshop was presented by Christine Vick, a past state BPW president from Durham. She spoke on three topics: professionalism, protocol, and parliamentary procedure. Ms. Vick highlighted some important and often overlooked points brought out in Robert's Rules of Order, and passed out a condensed version of the rules.

The third workshop, focusing on program patterns, implementation, and projects, was headed by Betty Powell and Joetta Feezor. The panel presentation stressed the importance of finance and public relations in connection with BPW clubs. Three problems existing today were pointed out and local clubs were encouraged to include these in their programs and projects for the year. They were: sex bias in children's books, the need for more day care centers, and the plight of the woman prisoner. Concerning these things, the panel pointed out that one out of every three working mothers with children under six years of age is in need of day care facilities. Also, four per cent of the total prison population is female.

Nearly every woman attending the eastern area meeting wore a button which read "ERA — yes". They were in reference to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment which was a much discussed topic. Participants were urged to take available pamphlets and brochures concerning ERA and to pass them on.

At the Saturday luncheon, Rebecca Melvin, the 1974 BPW Young Careerist representing North Carolina, was guest speaker. Ms. Melvin, who is a bank employee, pointed out the assets of the young careerist program and urged its continuance.
