Wildlife Afield

By JIM DEAN

Let's take a quick quiz to see how much you know about the wildlife conservation program in North Carolina. Here's a hint. If you get all these questions right without guessing, you're unusually well informed because some of these are difficult.

1) TRUE—or FALSE—
The daily bag limit on doves is set each year by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission following a study of the dove population by wildlife biologists.

2) TRUE—or FALSE—
If you catch someone hunting on your private, posted property, the best thing to do is call your local Wildlife Protector.

3) TRUE—or FALSE —
If you pay taxes in North Carolina, you are automatically contributing to state-supported wildlife programs to conserve fish and game populations and improve hunting and fishing.

4) TRUE—or FALSE —
The deer population in North Carolina is undergoing a slow but steady decline as a result of changing habitat, poaching and hunting.

5) TRUE—or FALSE—
If you like to hunt and fish, a career as a Wildlife Protector (game warden) is a good way to combine business and pleasure.

6) TRUE—or FALSE —
A law-abiding sportsman who follows all state and federal laws governing hunting and fishing should never have to worry about violating any law pertaining to these sports.

Okay, all finished? Here are the answers.

1) This one is FALSE. The daily bag limit on doves is set by Federal authorities under the U.S. Bureau of Fish and Wildlife. All migratory birds, including waterfowl, are regulated by Federal authority, though states may select certain options on some species.

2) Again, FALSE. Though a Wildlife Protector may be able to assist you by verifying that someone is indeed hunting on your property, he cannot make an arrest for trespassing. The Wildlife Commission has no authority over trespass laws, so if someone is hunting on your property without permission, your best bet would be to call the Sheriff.

3) FALSE. No state taxes are channeled to support wildlife conservation programs in North Carolina. Such programs are paid for primarily by license fees from hunters and fishermen.

4) FALSE. The deer population is actually increasing in North Carolina, and is in fact higher now than at any time in recorded history largely as a result of wildlife management programs supported by hunting license sales.

5) FALSE. I'll bet this one fooled you. Ask any Wildlife Protector and he'll quickly tell you that he's so busy enforcing wildlife laws during prime hunting and fishing times that he rarely ever has a chance to go hunting and fishing.

6) FALSE. Perhaps this wasn't a fair question, but although a knowledge and willingness to abide by all state and federal laws governing hunting and fishing is very commendable, it isn't enough to keep you out of possible trouble. Some communities and counties in North Carolina have passed local laws pertaining to hunting and fishing which may affect only a small area, but the sportsman is responsible for knowing about them too.

That's it. How did you do? If you got them all correct, take a bow. You know more about wildlife conservation programs and laws in this state than 90 per cent of the rest of us.

What's that? You say you didn't get many right? Well, don't worry. You've got a lot of company, and that's the reason for the quiz. We wanted you to know the answers because the better informed you are about wildlife programs, the better those wildlife programs will be.

No Food Shortage

Despite smaller 1974 grain crops and substantial farm exports, American consumers need have no fear of food shortages. The bad weather which cut our feed grain production was a dramatic development which attracted national attention. As a result of this emphasis, consumers gained the impression that we faced a food crisis.

Our 1974 feed grain crops will be sufficient to meet our needs and provide for some exports. Adjustments will be made within the market system. Less grain will be fed to livestock and export demands are expected to be less than in 1973. Consumers will continue to have ample food supplies this year and the years ahead if farmers are allowed to produce and receive a fair return for their products.

The erroneous impression of domestic food shortages has generated some public opinion in support of limiting U.S. farm exports. If such sentiment results in government mandatory export controls, this could jeopardize farmers' adequate returns which are a necessary incentive to increased production. Consumers would eventually be hurt by lower farm production. U.S. agriculture is most efficient when it is geared to full production — and consumers ultimately benefit from lower unit production costs.

The U.S. market is still the best market for our farmers, but we produce more than the domestic market can take. We export two-thirds of our wheat, one-half of our soybeans, one-third of our cotton, and one-fourth of our feed grains.

These exports are essential not only to the farm economy, but to the total national economy.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day. We Hope You And Your Family Will Have A Safe Holiday.
