Perquimans County Presented Official Bicentennial Flag At Ceremonies Here

By KATHY NEWBERN

Last Wednesday proved to be a red letter day for Perquimans residents when the official Bicentennial flag was presented to the county.

Several activities surrounded the ceremony and festivities.

The Hertford Business and Professional Women's Club sponsored an old fashioned ice cream social on the courthouse lawn beginning at 3 p.m. Club members dressed in Bicentennial costumes sold homemade pound cake and ice cream as fast as they could scoop.

Also during the afternoon, the local Jaycettes sold Perquimans County Bicentennial t-shirts. And following the flag presentation, the American Legion Post 126 sponsored a fish fry from 5-7 p.m.

The flag presentation got underway around 4 p.m. with the raising of the colors by the American Legion Post 126, followed by the invocation. Mayor Bill Cox welcomed the townspeople and introduced special guests, Joe Nowell, Perquimans County Bicentennial Committee Chairman, Lester Simpson, Perquimans County Commissioners Chairman, Dr. Lawrence J. Wheeler, Communities Consultant for the North Carolina Bicentennial and Lieutenant Governor Jim Hunt. Other special guests included Senator Melvin R. Daniels' Representatives Vernon James and Camden Commissioner Macon Johnson.

In his remarks, Nowell pointed out that with continued community support for such projects as the Newbold-White House and the Hertford Beautification Committee, "we can make 1976 as memorable as 1776."

A special musical presentation was made by the Hertford Fifes and Drums.

Dr. Wheeler, in his introduction of Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, said, "When people in North Carolina get together to celebrate their heritage, Jim Hunt wants to be there with them and he's here today."

In his remarks, Hunt said "Now is the time to look at what's been accomplished and what needs to be accomplished. In our country, in our state of North Carolina and in our individual communities, we have the opportunity to look at our past, measure our present and mold our future." Hunt mentioned several historical aspects of the county, its surrounding region and the state. He said, "North Carolina did indeed provide leadership for our fight for independence."

"Here in the South," said Hunt, "the day will come when the nation will look to us for leadership. We've been criticized as a region as being out of step with the times, but our southern way of life is different and a way of life more people will be coming around to.

We in the South have a set of values and respect for those values."

In closing, Hunt asked for an amount of soul-searching on the public's part in order for a rededication in the spirit of America.

Following the lieutenant governor's remarks, Dr. Wheeler presented the North Carolina Bicentennial flag to Bicentennial chairman Joe Nowell making Perquimans one of 82 counties and 102 communities across the state to be designated as a part of the Bicentennial movement.

In special presentations, Jaycette President Jean Brown gave the lieutenant governor and Dr. Wheeler Bicentennial t-shirts and W.F. Ainsley gave Lt. Gov. Hunt two historical maps of the county.
