Bureau Promotes Farm Products As Holiday Gifts

Perquimans County Farm Bureau has joined a statewide Farm Bureau effort to increase consumption of farm products during the holiday season, according to Carroll Baker Sr., president of the farm organization.

Baker said the local Farm Bureau will promote the idea of giving farm products for Christmas in an effort to increase the sale of farm commodities, especially those in an economic slump.

He pointed out that the giving of such products not only solves the age-old problem of what to give for Christmas, but also expresses the true spirit of the season.

The county farm leader suggested that a number of products lend themselves to gift-giving, including dairy products, fruits, turkey, canned meat, peanuts, and tobacco products. He also pointed out that many grocery stores sell gift certificates which can be redeemable in farm products.

"It is important that farm products continue to move through the marketing system in order to help insure an adequate return to the producer," Baker said. "Further cut-backs in production and the possibility of higher prices in the future might otherwise result," he added.
