

Sponsor Spring Dance

The Ladies of the Inter-County Fire Department, Woodville sponsored their annual spring dance Saturday night at the National Guard Armory. This is a yearly project for the ladies.

The foyer held a white wrought iron loveseat, chair and table. The tables inside the ballroom were decorated with pink tablecloths and yellow tablecloths. Upon each table was a nosegay of pink, yellow, green, and blue crepe flowers. All the candles were green with ivory at the base. Behind the bandstand was a huge rainbow and coming out to the front and hanging from the ceiling were clouds and stars. The music was provided by "Roger and the Playboys." Those on the decorating committee were Carolyn Whitehead, Ellen Rountree, Betty Ferrell, Betty Ann Russell, Judy Perry, Lois Jennings, Lucy Cartwright, Dottie Cayton, Sharon Wyatt and some of the firemen.

The officers of the organization are president — Ellen Rountree, vice-president — Sharon Wyatt, secretary — Betty Ann Russell, treasurer — Betty Ferrell.

Officers of the Fire Dept. are Chief — Melvin Rountree, president — Mickie Phelps, secretary — Erskine Wyatt and treasurer — Hersy Gregory.

COMMEMORATING THE BICENTENNIAL — Pictured above is the bronze statue entitled, "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness." The ECSU gift commemorates the Bicentennial and carved around its base are 1776-1976. The statue is sitting on the courthouse lawn in Pasquotank County on a marble column also donated by the university.

Belvidere Resident Works On Statue Dedicated To Albemarle Area From ECSU

By KATHY NEWBERN
A Belvidere resident who attends Elizabeth City State University recently worked on a Bicentennial statue which has been dedicated to the people of the Albemarle area.

Rebecca Spivey of Belvidere participated in the unveiling and dedication ceremony of "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness," a bronze statue of a hand holding a torch, now sitting on the Pasquotank County Courthouse lawn in Elizabeth City. The statue is the result of Ms. Spivey's efforts and those of an ECSU alumni, Wilbur Davis. The project was completed under the supervision and guidance of Dr. Vincent J. deGregorio, head of the art department at ECSU. Dr. deGregorio designed the statue and Davis did the foundation work. Ms. Spivey did the fine carving, which she described as the "surface" work. She spent a total of over 40 hours working on the statue. After completion, the statue was taken to New York where it was bronzed. The next step was the dedication which was held in Elizabeth City recently. The statue is a gift from the students of ECSU to the residents of the Albemarle, and it commemorates the Bicentennial. Along with its title, 1776-1976 is also carved around the base of the statue.

Ms. Spivey is a native of Ransour, N.C. and now resides in Belvidere with her husband, Ken and two children, Lance, age 8, and Jennifer, age 2. The wife and mother is a sophomore art major at ECSU, and started classes there in the fall of 1974. She has had art classes before, some of which were under Ms. Maxine Ferrell, former art instructor at the College of the Albemarle. The first painting she did while taking the COA class was entered in the Pasquotank County Arts Council show at Southgate Mall and she received an Honorable Mention. Ms. Spivey said this really "spurred" her on. In addition to this, she added that her family is also an encouragement urging her to continue on with her art studies. She said that Ms. Ferrell was also a "big inspiration" to her, as was a personal friend.

Ms. Spivey has also participated in the last two art exhibits at the Museum of the Albemarle and has shown her work in several arts shows at Southgate Mall. At present, she has two of her paintings in an ECSU student display at Wachovia Bank in Elizabeth City.

Concerning the subject matter of her art, Ms. Spivey commented, "I can't really say that I have one subject matter." But she added that she enjoys painting nature scenes and animals, especially butterflies. The artist said that her style is realistic, but she recently finished her first abstract painting which is a portrait of Christ. Concerning her first abstract, she said, "I'm really thrilled with it since it is my first."

In describing how she begins a painting, the petite artist replied, "I just get an idea and it just grows or decreases. It seems that a certain canvas is just meant for a certain picture." She added that she agreed with author John Waugh when he said, "See it big, feel it big, and paint it big." For Ms. Spivey, this really hits home since she likes to work with large canvases.

Although painting is her first love, Ms. Spivey is also interested in sculpture and ceramics, which is what led her to the statue project.
