Aged need attention when on drug therapy

The handicaps of older citizens are often overlooked. Diminishing mental and physical conditions can leave the aged person in a feeble-minded, child-like state. Yet, many of these same people are given the responsibility of taking powerfully potent medications - a responsibility we'd never dream of giving our kids! In all honesty, I can see little difference between the handicap of old age and that of extreme youthfulness where strong drugs are indicated.

Like children, older citizens need special attention while taking medicines. Let's make it our business to help the elderly use drugs safely and properly.
