CREDIT TO INDEPENDENT OF ELIZABETH CITY, AND ITS "TATTLER." Credit for the following goes to The Independent of Elizabeth City, and its "Tattler." A good WPA joke is always worth reading, so we could not let this one slip by without giving our readers a chance at it: "The WPA has been the brunt of almost as many jokes as was Mae West in her heyday. Latest WPA joke is that of a man who was working on a building. He was on the inside. Picking up a nail to drive into the wall, he noticed that the end that goes into the wall was facing him. 'That's funny,' he remarked looking at the point of the nail, 'They got the head on the wrong end.' He called the foreman and showed it to him. The foreman called the superintendent of the job and they held a general discussion on the nail with the head on the wrong end. The finally decided they were working on the wrong side of the building, because the head of the nail was facing the wall and certainly couldn't be driven from the inside, it was an outside nail. And then one of them happened to glance down into the keg of nails. 'Here's the trouble,' he said, 'They got the nails all mixed up when they put them in the keg. Just look at them, part are facing inside and part outside.' 'Then another man was hired to separate the nails in the keg that were pointing to the outside, from those that were pointing to the inside, and everybody's troubles were over.'"

Cancer warning goes out to X-ray patients

Question: What's this I hear about radiation treatments and thyroid cancer?
Answer: It is estimated that between 1930 and 1960 about two million persons who were treated by X-ray radiation while still under the age of puberty may be susceptible to thyroid cancer, today. The risk of developing thyroid cancer in such cases varies according to location of treatment on the person and amount of radiation received. If, as a child, you received X-ray treatments prior to 1960, consult your physician. Thyroid cancer is curable, if treated in time, so seek the advice of your doctor, promptly.
