Local Students Studying Careers

CHAPEL HILL — Students from four North Carolina universities are learning about health careers firsthand this summer. And three of the participants are from Perquimans County.

They are working throughout the summer as health interns in 26 health-care agencies including hospitals, social service departments, county health departments and community health centers.

The clinical work-study summer health program is coordinated by the North Carolina Health Manpower Development Program (NCHMDP) at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The more than 70 intern students are enrolled during the school year in a business or health services curriculum at Elizabeth City State University, Pembroke State University, North Carolina Central University or UNC-CH.

The summer program, now in its fourth year, is designed to give minority and disadvantaged students an opportunity to receive experience in a career they're interested in and to reinforce their motivation and commitment to a health career. Other program goals are to increase student awareness of the need for more minority health professionals and to help students understand the variety of services performed by people in health careers. The summer program is related to a major goal of NCHMDP — to recruit minorities for health professions.

Some of the careers students expressed an interest in this summer include medicine, nursing, dentistry, pharmacy, physical therapy, health administration, speech pathology, medical technology and medical social work.

Students not only work full time for 10 weeks, but also attend seminars, see films on health careers, work with self-instructional material and go on field trips to health professional schools and agencies.

All three of the Perquimans County students participating in the summer attend school at Elizabeth City State University.

Gerry Tillett of Rt. 4, Hertford is a senior at ECSU and is majoring in Social Services. His summer work-study is with the Albemarle Regional Planning and Development Commission (ARPDC).

Lois Burke of Rt. 1, Belvidere, also a senior at ECSU, is majoring in Intermediate Education and is involved with work at the District Health Department serving Pasquotank, Perquimans, Camden and Chowan counties.

Larry Felton of Winfall, a sophomore at ESCU and also majoring in Intermediate Education, is participating in the summer program through the Opportunities Industrialization Center which serves eastern North Carolina.

Students who have participated in the program in the past have been enthusiastic, said Dr. E. Lavonia Allison, director of NCHMDP. One student said, "It gave me a good understanding of the jobs available." Another commented, "I felt involved in doing something worthwhile. The clinical experience was great."

For Your Information

Dear friends,

In this age of travel accident deaths, a legal will should provide for guardianship of children in case of simultaneous death of both parents. Trust funds for surviving minors are also an important part of good estate planning.

DIFFICULTY IN KEEPING THE COVENANT

Judges 2:13-23
When their leaders passed from the scene of action, the Israelites generally seemed to forget God.

Their Defection — Judges 2:13
After the death of Joshua and the elders, the people quickly turned to the idolatry practiced around them. The Israelites turned to the worship of Baal, the evil male god of power and violence, and Astarte, the female goddess of fertility or fruitfulness and corruption. For their folly and rebellion against God, the Israelites had to pay the penalty.

Their Distress — Judges 2:14-15
When the chosen people turned from God to worship idols, it was necessary for Him to bring them to repentance from their wicked ways. God refused to allow the Israelites to consort with idolaters who were participating in obscene rites. As a method of correction, "He delivered them into the hands of spoilers."

God is no respecter of persons. Even His chosen people found that failure to obey Him brought judgment and sorrow. Their deliverance into the hands of their enemies was a definite judgment of God. The fact that a nation has been exalted to a position of honor and power will not avail when God is forgotten. When any people turn from worshipping God to idolatry, God's anger will be raised against them and His chastening hand will be laid upon them. Every Christian should know that if he persists in walking contrary to the will of God he may expect divine chastisement. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."

Their Deliverance — Judges 2:16-23
While God had to punish the Israelites on account of their apostasy, or turning from Him, of their plunging into the depths of iniquity, and of their going from bad to worse. He did not forsake them. Their continual wandering from God was only exceeded by His mercy in delivering and restoring them. The history of their disobedience and restoration illustrates the statement, "But where sin abounded grace did much more abound" (Romans 5:20). Moved with compassion toward them, God repeatedly manifested His grace by giving to them another opportunity.

For their deliverance God raised up judges, whom He used to rescue the people from their enemies, as well as to call the Israelites back to Him. When the Israelites turned to God, the judges were used of Him to deliver them from punishment, which shows that the divine judgments are often corrective.
