June is Dairy Month

June is Dairy Month, and throughout the Southeast, the celebration will take place under the theme "Milk — A Natural Choice".

For over 40 years consumers have paid special tribute to dairy farm families during June for their unique contributions to our nation's health. Although milk production and promotion take place all year long, June has been designated as a special month-long salute to the people, and industry who provide consumers with their daily needs of high quality, nutritious milk and milk products.

Modern milking methods vary considerably from those used during the first June Dairy Month in 1937.

Just during the past 10 years, U.S. dairymen have been able to produce nearly the same quantity of milk as they did a decade ago despite around 30 percent less labor. This is attributed to improved methods and industrial ingenuity.

Projections for the next 10 years include a doubling in milk output per man-hour because of even more efficient dairy systems and milking equipment, larger herd sizes and a higher milk production per cow. These developments will hopefully help dairy farmers maintain a reasonable return on their investment, management, and labor while continuing to provide consumers with a high quality product at reasonable prices.

Today's successful dairy requires teamwork and close attention to all phases of the dairy operation. While the modern dairyman doesn't have to be an expert in all areas of the operation, he does need general knowledge of the various professions having a direct bearing on his business. He must be a skilled businessman in every sense of the word if he is to be able to stay in the business of producing "nature's most nearly perfect" food.

June Dairy Month seems to be a natural time to thank our dairy farmers for providing the finest milk and dairy products in the world.
