Education Week in the county

American Education Week was celebrated in Perquimans County Schools, November 12-18. This year's theme was "Education Can Turn Things Around". It is important to know what is happening in the schools. To know, is to see into all of our futures.

Many different activities happened during the week. It was a joining of the home and school life of the young children.

Parents should always be interested in the education of their children. They want to know what's going on in their child's classroom. Parent conferences held at the time was a good way to get school and home working together again. Miss Newly's first grade students' parents were given the opportunity to meet their child's teacher and to find out about the work they're doing.

During American Education Week parents at Hertford Grammar School visited and helped students by reading to them and aiding with seat work to reinforce skills being taught.

Ms. Thelma Skinner's first grade class also encouraged the parents to eat lunch with their children. The week was a time for better understanding for parents as well as students.

As part of their study of Thanksgiving, Mrs. Davis' second grade class studied how the Pilgrim children learned. It helped them to understand how education began in America. Mrs. Hoggard's third grade class wrote original poems during the week.

Special efforts were made to master the use of various kinds of dictionaries in grades four, five, and six at the Hertford Grammar School Library.

The children used the unabridged, abridged, geographical, biographical and the thesaurus dictionaries to make attractive word lists. They got a chance to meet new people and see new places in doing so. Each child shared his or her information with another person in the class.

Mrs. Kay Crum's fifth grade class learned that the theme for this year had a two-fold purpose. First, it was a message to young people in school that the success they enjoy in years ahead greatly depend on their education and training. Second, it is a reminder to all that education is necessary for the better understanding of ourselves, others, and the world around us.

The class made posters showing what the theme meant to them and displayed these throughout the school.

The fifth and sixth grade G and T classes planned a field trip to the N.C. Marine Resource Center in Manteo. The trip was made in conjunction with projects and the reading of the book, Island of the Blue Dolphins.

All questioning done while the students read the book were based on Bloom's Taxonomy. This questioning and thinking were extended at the Resource Center where they were asked to use all levels of thinking in the taxonomy. Much of this was accomplished in a laboratory setting which gave the children first hand experience.

The sixth grade G and T classes are now involved in a film making project. The students are learning pertinent terminology and techniques before they write the script and proceed to make the film. It is a very exciting and different experience and a lot is being learned by the teacher as well as the students.

Mrs. P.H. Hill's sixth graders at Perquimans Union School's activities for the week included panel discussions, writing essays and making posters and pins, all emphasizing the theme. The students began the week by decorating the classroom door with art and displaying posters in the classroom and hallway.

At the ESEA Reading Lab, located at Perquimans Union, the students engaged in a number of activities. One group had to write essays on different topics concerning education. Another class made posters on education. Each student, as well as teacher, set aside 15 minutes each day to read something they enjoyed.

Abuse is growing problem

RALEIGH - In its efforts to prevent child abuse and neglect, North Carolina has requested and recently received a $235,000 grant from the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect.

Robert Ward, director of the Division of Social Services of the N.C. Department of Human Resources whose Division is responsible for protection services for children, said he was pleased the grant had been approved.

"Child abuse and neglect is a growing problem in North Carolina and across the nation. During the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1978, citizens across our state reported, as required by law, 18,686 children they suspected of being abused or neglected. These reports were made to county social services directors. After investigations were completed by the county social services departments, 7,438 children were confirmed as being abused or neglected or both compared to only 6,354 children the previous year," Ward said.

He said that some of the grant money will be spent on several demonstration projects to help prevent child abuse and neglect.
