Perquimans Gardening By Jean Winslow

Keep old tulip and daffodil blossoms removed from bulbs, and cover plant with annuals. If you wish, lift the bulbs after blooming with a clump of dirt and plant in a trench until they go dormant.

Before heavy seeding and pine growth begins, repair and paint fences and lattices. Birdhouses should be cleaned out, but do not paint them now; birds do not like the smell of fresh paint. The color, though, doesn't seem to matter.

Thin out seedlings in coldframes so they will have enough room to develop.

Put a handful of lime around clematis vines, and fertilize lightly.

In this area, fescue grass is the most popular variety. However, in eastern North Carolina, centipede is highly adaptable. It does not require as much fertilizer as other grasses, but no amount of chemical will make its natural yellow-green color any greener. It requires less mowing—a distinct advantage. It is a sod-forming grass, a creeping grass that will spread faster than other types.

That's the good news. The main drawback is that centipede forms a loose turf that is not wear-resistant. State horticulturists suggest you consider the "busy-ness" of an area before planting.

Centipede is seeded or sprigged in May, June, or July, and must be kept moist. After it starts growing, apply a high nitrogen fertilizer. Then the next April apply 3-9-19 fertilizer. Mow when the grass is two inches high.

Perquimans County Librarian, Ellen Bowen, and her staff have put together a series of very fine book displays, presently concentrating on organic gardening, and food preparation and preservation. Here is a small list of books that may be just what you need for your hobby:

Mother Earth Magazine; Organic Gardener by Foster; Food Preservation Book by Barbor; Book of Herb Lore by Northcote; Houseplants: How to Keep Them Fat and Happy by Fenklestein; Terrarium Gardening, by Elbert; Fruit Gardening by Dixon; Art of Drying Flowers; Bonsai for Beginners by Arkin.

Start putting in the ground by May 1:

- Beans, bush lima - 1/2 lb.
- Beans, pole lima - 1/2 lb.
- Eggplant - 2 plants
- Okra - 1/4 packet
- Peas, southern - 1/2 lb.
- Pepper, sweet and hot - 4 plants
- Pumpkin - 1/4 packet. (amounts indicated are per person)

We want to invite everyone who is interested to share our azaleas and other spring plants in our front and back yard on Front St. Two rules: don't bother to knock, and take all the time you want. Love to have you.

Finally, try to learn to identify plants on the endangered list. Obtain illustrations and descriptions from the Office of Endangered Species, Fish, and Wildlife Service, Washington, D.C., 20240. You, too, can learn to spot the Virginia birch, Persistan trillium, Chapman rhododendron and the like.

Being prepared may save you the notoriety of being known as THE person who dug up and threw away the last Furbish lousewort in this whole country.
