Hertford Council approves closing city cemetery at dark

By JANE WILLIAMS

Discussion centered on a request to secure Cedarwood Cemetery during the dark hours Monday night at the Hertford Town Council meeting.

A petition was presented to the Council bearing the signatures of 243 individuals asking that Cedarwood Cemetery be closed at night to help prevent littering and vandalism on the premises.

In a previous meeting the council voted to place No Parking signs in the cemetery, which was done approximately two weeks ago.

Several council members voiced the opinion that they thought the signs were inadequate. It was pointed out that a few of the signs were stolen the first night.

Councilman Billy Winslow said, "I have checked the cemetery every day since our last meeting and have found two beer cans in that period. I think we're being hasty when the signs have only been up for two weeks."

Councilman Joe Towe White, Jr. stated that the cemetery was also being used for purposes other than those intended by the town. "I saw a man out there playing golf on the back portion of the cemetery away from the graves the other day," White said.

Councilman John Beers said, "I feel that the cemetery should be utilized and respected, it is not right to leave it open for these happenings."

Councilman Winslow pointed out that the town would lose road revenues if the cemetery was closed.

Hertford Mayor Bill Cox confirmed that Hertford would lose $885 per year from the State Power Agency if the road through the cemetery was closed at night. "According to Ralph Shaw, Executive Director of Northeastern NC Municipal Power Agency, whenever a road is closed it is no longer considered a public road," Cox said. (Hertford gains $885 in revenue for each mile of public roads.)

A motion was made by Councilman Beers to formulate a plan to close the cemetery during dark hours and to draw up and ordinance to use the cemetery for cemetery purposes only.

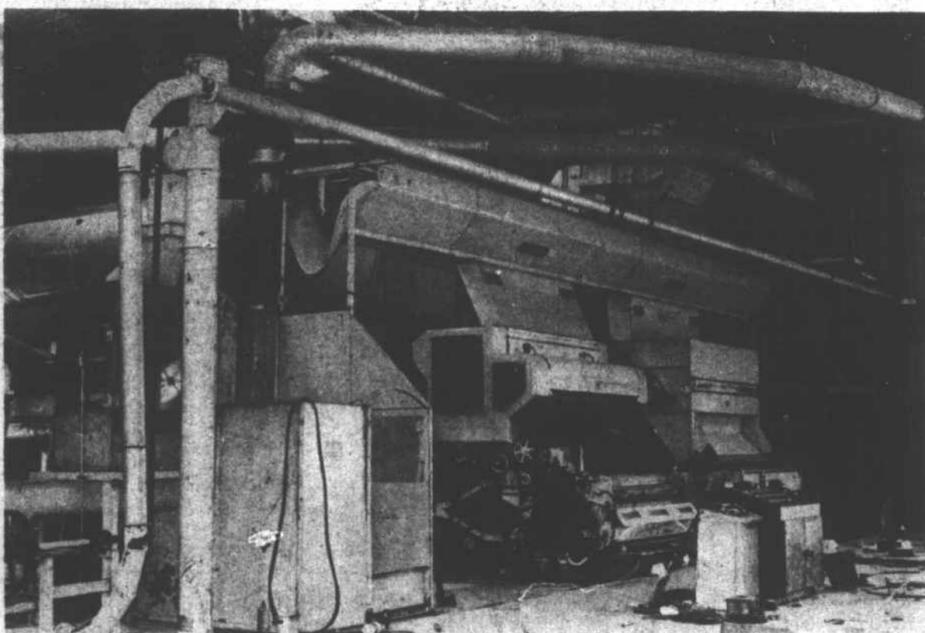

The motion was approved.

In other action the council denied a request from the Board of Education to allow them access to the road adjacent to the bus garage during home football games.

The council voted unanimously to sell to Hoffer Lumber Co., standing timber on approximately two acres of land around the well field adjoining the Wilson estate.

The council granted permission to the Mayor to negotiate with Dickerson Inc. concerning street work at the site of the work project on King Street.

In executive session the council appointed Walter Edwards, Jr. town attorney.

Chamber of Commerce Merchants set goals at meeting

By JANE WILLIAMS

The Perquimans County Chamber of Commerce held a planning meeting on Wednesday night, September 7, at Anglers Cove Seafood Restaurant.

The meeting was one of several special sessions that have been initiated this year by the Merchants Committee.

At previous meetings the topic of discussions has centered on finding ways to increase trade, for Perquimans County businesses. The group has formed four committees to find ways to address such basic needs as: creating more jobs, entertainment, promoting the county, education, developing pride and loyalty in the county and its people, creating friendlier atmospheres in local businesses, and ways to meet the supply and demand of the local consumer.

Last weeks meeting was held to hear reports from the chairman of each committee and to act on motions made by these committees.

Committee Chairman Lewis Evans talked with the group about plans to develop the assets that are already available in Perquimans County.

Evans suggested that the group work to develop and clean up the river from the "S" Bridge to the Harris Shopping Center area, making it more attractive for use by local people as well tourist.

Hertford Mayor Bill Cox informed the group of an offer made by the RC&D (Soil Conservation) to help with the river project. "This project will have to involve some type of government grant with local matching funds," Cox said.

A resolution was made to address all of the river problems in the area surrounding Perquimans County, to help obtain matching funds to help with this problem, and to support any effort made by other groups in dealing with these problems.

Evans commended the merchants present on their endeavor to try and work together to achieve common goals by meeting on a regular basis this year and planning for the future.

The group concluded that they would meet quarterly for discussion and implementation of new ideas in addition to the annual banquet held in December.

"Our group also concluded that there is a definite need for a paid county manager in Perquimans County," Evans said.

After some discussion the group indicated that they would be willing to support an effort to petition the County Commissioners to hire a full time County Manager.

Mayor Cox said, "The Committee of 100 is currently planning a presentation to the County Commissioners concerning adopting the County Manager form of government. I would like to see these two presentations coordinated and made at the same time."

A resolution was passed to work with the Committee of 100 on making a presentation to the commissioners.

Committee Chairman Alan Winslow presented an outline of a service directory for Perquimans County. The directory will include listings and advertisements for Perquimans County businesses and will be mass distributed to all residents of the county.

"The directory will be similar to the Yellow Pages in the phone book, only it will be personalized for this county," Winslow said.

Chamber of Commerce President, Mary Harrell, reported on an idea to conduct a survey through civic groups concerning shopping habits of local residents. The survey will include questions concerning status of residence, current shopping habits, and other information deemed necessary to local merchants for attracting more of the local trade.

The recommendation received overwhelming response from the group.

Harrell also reminded the group of a clean up drive to be held this fall under the leadership of O.B. Rawls. She also reminded the group that the annual membership drive would be held in October, noting that there are 33 more members in the Chamber of Commerce this year than there was last year.

Harrell told the group that the Chamber of Commerce would sponsor Ribbon Cutting Ceremonies and Ground Breaking Ceremonies for any new business in Perquimans County.

She also reminded the group of this weeks upcoming Indian Summer Festival and encouraged all present to participate.
