Winslow awarded honors by NC Travel Industry

RALEIGH — Mrs. Emmett Winslow (Lucille) and Discovery Place have been awarded North Carolina's highest honors by the travel industry. Winslow is the 1983 recipient of the Charles J. Parker Travel Award for service to the state's travel and tourism industry. Discovery Place was awarded the G. Lynn Nisbet Award for outstanding contributions by an organization.

Hugh Morton, owner of Grandfather Mountain and past president of the Travel Council of North Carolina, and William Friday, president of the Greater University of North Carolina, presented the Parker Award to Winslow at the Travel Council's annual convention at the Hotel Europa in Chapel Hill.

"Lucille Winslow was the first person who saw the big picture," said Morton, calling her the "absolute queen of travel." President Friday referred to her as "one of North Carolina's real assets."

Winslow was cited for her nearly 50 years of activity in the travel industry in North Carolina. She has been involved with the Lost Colony outdoor drama since its beginning in 1937, presently serving as vice chairman.

From 1979 to 1982 she was chairman of the Roanoke Island Historical Association. Winslow is a member of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, appointed by Governor Hunt.

Working for the Four Hundredth, she has endeavored to make it truly a statewide activity through her efforts to create in every county an active committee and to encourage groups all over North Carolina to participate in the celebration.

Winslow has served as president of the North Carolina Hotel Association, director of the N.C. Restaurant Association, vice president of the Travel Council of N.C., and director of the N.C. Arts Council.

She is also an advisor to the Northeastern Historic Places Office in Edenton, a member of the board of the Historic Albemarle Tour, and a trustee of the Northeastern Branch of the N.C. Museum of History at Elizabeth City.

Bill Hensley, president of Hensley Associates and Travel Council vice president, presented the 1983 G. Lynn Nisbet Award to Freda Nicholson, executive director of Charlotte's Discovery Place.

Since opening on October 31, 1981, Discovery Place has brought national recognition to North Carolina through its very fine quality of scientific exhibits and programming.

It is a showpiece for the new type of "hands-on museum," following the lead of places like the Boston Children's Museum. Since the museum's opening, hundreds of thousands of people of all ages have spent hours inside its walls.

This was the 19th year of presentation by the Travel Council of the two travel awards. Each of the two annual awards is an Atmos Perpetual Motion Clock.

The Travel Council of North Carolina is a private nonprofit association representing the several facets of the travel and tourism industry.

Hertford, School Volunteer; Sarah Eason of Belvidere, One-On-One Volunteer; Mary C. Harrell of Hertford, accepting for the Perquimans County Chamber of Commerce, in the Community Volunteer Organization category; and Annette Teague of Hertford, accepting for The Open Door, in the Church/Religious Volunteer Group

Locals attend Conference

Marian Frierson of Belvidere, and Dianne M. Layden of Elizabeth City, formerly of Perquimans County, recently attended the Governor's Conference on Women and the Economy, held October 31 through November 2 at the Raleigh Civic Center.

Both Frierson and Layden found the conference to be exciting and thought-provoking. Both stated that they were proud to have been a part of a process that will ultimately affect all North Carolinians.

The new Office for Women's Economic Development, which Governor Hunt announced during the conference, will help implement those recommendations.
