Dowd attends educational conference in Greenville

Marion Byrd, Brenda Dail, and Linda Dowd from Perquimans High School attended the Atlantic Coast Business and Distributive Education conference at the Sheraton Inn in Greenville, N. C. on February 22-23, 1985.

The conference is sponsored annually by the Business Education and Administrative Services department of the School of Technology, East Carolina University, and is designed to provide insights on improving the instruction and learning of students for and about business.

The conference program was developed around the theme "Strategies for Excellence in Business and Distributive Education."

Experts from North Carolina, South Carolina, and from states as far away as Wisconsin, Michigan, Texas, New Jersey,

New York, and Ohio worked with teachers to make it possible for them to do their jobs better and more efficiently. These experts were brought to the conference because they are "on the leading edge" of what business, industry, government, and other employing agencies and organizations expect individuals to know and to be able to do to begin working in business, marketing, and office careers immediately upon graduation from a secondary or postsecondary school. They are also experts in curriculum development in business education and methods of teaching.
