Quilters day planned in eastern North Carolina

Quiltmaking in eastern North Carolina, focusing on the North Carolina Quilt Project, will be featured in the August-September issue of the national magazine, Lady's Circle Patchwork Quilts. Published six times a year, each issue features a different section of the country.

Carter Houck, Editorial Director of the magazine, will arrive in North Carolina from New York today (Thursday) April 9. She will be accompanied by photographer Myron Miller and Karen O'Dowd, editorial assistant. Ruth H. Roberson, Director of the North Carolina Quilt Project, will travel with them for seven days along the North Carolina coast. Beginning in Hertford on April 10, they will go to Hatteras (April 11), Beaufort (April 12), Washington (April 13), New Bern (April 13-14), and Wilmington (April 15-16).

On Saturday, April 11, they will attend the last Quilt Documentation Day of the North Carolina Quilt Project. Hazel Lewis of Snow Hill, Regional Coordinator for the Project, is planning the day in cooperation with Yancey Foster of Hatteras. Local citizens are asked to bring quilts made before 1976 to the Hatteras Community Building between the hours of 9 and 3 for documentation.

This last Quilt Documentation Day will make a total of 74 days that have been held across the state. Because of the enthusiastic public response to these days, the North Carolina Quilt Project has documented more than 10,000 quilts. This is the largest amount of primary data in existence about American quilts.

A computer program is being developed for filing and sorting information collected by the Project. Eventually this information can be shared with other states, so they will know about quilts made in their states that are now in North Carolina.

All of the information collected by the Project will be permanently stored in the North Carolina Museum of History and will be available for study by those who are interested in quiltmaking, women's studies, folklore, textiles, and North Carolina history.

There will be an exhibition of quilts from the Project at the North Carolina Museum of History in Raleigh September 15, 1988 through January 8, 1989. A book reflecting the work of the Project and quiltmaking in North Carolina will be published at the same time.

The North Carolina Quilt Project is a nonprofit corporation with tax-exempt status.

The Project is sponsored by the North Carolina Museum of History and the North Carolina Quilt Symposium, Inc. Members of the Board of Directors are Ruth H. Roberson of Durham, Sue McCarter of Charlotte, LaVerne Domach and Karen Pervier of Winston-Salem, Kathy Sullivan and Martha Battle of Raleigh, and Beverly Smalls of Wilmington.

The North Carolina Quilt Project has received funding from the Folk Arts Section Of The National Endowment For The Arts, the Folklife and Visual Arts Sections Of The North Carolina Arts Council, the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Inc., and the North Carolina Quilt Symposium, Inc. The Project needs matching funds for grants received. Donations can be made to the Project in honor of or in memory of a quiltmaker and should be sent, along with the name of the quiltmaker, to the North Carolina Quilt Project, P.O. Box 2739, Durham, North Carolina 27705.

Highway patrolman planning for Easter

RALEIGH—Many North Carolina families plan to travel during the long Easter holiday weekend, and the State Highway Patrol plans to use every available trooper to help make the highways as safe as possible.

Easter is one of the most dangerous holiday periods of the year. Last year, there were 1,266 traffic accidents during the Easter holiday weekend. Sixteen people were killed and 999 were injured.

"Speeding and driving while impaired are the two leading causes of accidents and fatalities on our highways," Highway Patrol Commander Colonel J.F. Cardwell said. According to Colonel Cardwell, troopers will strictly enforce all motor vehicle laws with special emphasis on the detection and apprehension of speeding an impaired drivers.

"A good way to reduce fatalities and injuries is to drive at the posted speed limit, obey traffic laws, wear your seat belt; and if you drink, don't drive," said Colonel Cardwell.

The Easter holiday weekend begins at 6 p.m. on Friday, April, and ends at midnight on Monday, April 20.
