North Carolinians urged to take precautions to protect themselves in extreme temperatures

COURTIES
The bride was honored at a Tupperware shower hosted by Betty Phelps, Darlene Harrell and Kathy Matthews in the church fellowship hall. Marta Price, Gail Twiford and Paulette Berry were hostesses at a lingerie shower at the home of Ms. Price. Phyllis Perry and Debbie Malcolm were hostesses of a bridesmaid's luncheon at Whistling Pines. The bride's parents along with the bride and groom hosted a rehearsal party at the church fellowship hall.

North Carolinians should take extra precautions to protect themselves during hot weather. When temperatures climb into the 90's or higher, particularly if accompanied by high humidity, people need to take extra measures to protect themselves from the heat. Heat-related illnesses can be a real problem, especially for older persons and infants. Those with chronic illnesses and people who work directly in the sun, such as field laborers, construction workers, or those involved in occasional heavy recreational activities.
Symptoms of the three heat-related illnesses include:
Heat Cramps—muscle cramps, often beginning in the stomach and legs.
Heat Exhaustion—normal or slightly higher temperature; pale clammy skin; excessive perspiration; tiredness and weakness; possible headache and cramps; dizziness; nausea or vomiting; and possible fainting.

Heat Stroke—high body temperature of 106 degrees or higher; hot red, dry skin due to lack of perspiration; strong, rapid pulse; and possible delirium or unconsciousness.
People who exhibit symptoms of heat-related illness should be taken to a cool area, allowed to lie down and their clothing loosened. Heat stroke is very serious and can be fatal.
A person who exhibits symptoms of serious heat-related illness should see a physician or get to a hospital immediately.
There were four heat-related deaths reported in North Carolina in 1985 and two in 1984. 1986 statistics are not available yet.
Ways to beat the heat:
Drink plenty of liquids, possible as

Car show scheduled

Waxhaw, North Carolina's Seventh Annual Car Show will be held on Saturday, July 18, 1987, in downtown Waxhaw on the green of North and South Main Streets.
Last year's show was a great success with 158 cars and trucks. 1987 promises to be even greater. There will be three divisions, 29 classes, 97 trophies, plus Fire Chief and Mayor's trophies.
The proceeds of this event go to the Waxhaw Community Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad for new equipment, building fund and continuing education.
The show gets under way at 7 a.m. as cars begin arriving. Trophies and awards will be presented at 4:30 p.m.

The Fire Department and Eastern Star, both located on North Main Street, will provide food and refreshments throughout the day.
As a special added attraction, Nas-car's Harry Gant's number 33 show car will be on display from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.
Waxhaw is a small town located twenty-five miles south east of Charlotte at the intersection of Highway 16 and 75—a turn of the century town with some 20 antique shops that line both sides of its historical streets.
For further information call Jim Howie at (704) 843-3085 between 7 p.m. and 10 p.m.
The car show is free to the public.

Lavezzo to attend seminar

Susan Lavezzo of Lake Ridge, Va. was one of eighty eight students selected nationwide to participate in the 1987 Young Writers Workshop held at the University of Va. in Charlottesville. The students met and worked with published writers in a week of seminars. Creative writing skills were emphasized in the areas of poetry, song writing, and drama. To culminate the week's activities, each student presented a piece of writing conducted in class a group gathering at the Writers Cafe.
Susan attended Fred M. Lynn Middle School. Her honors and activities included induction into the National Jr. Honor Society, sports editor of the newspaper, Literary Magazine staff, first place winner in the school's write-a-thon, and a Pep Band member.
Susan is the daughter of John and Carolyn Lavezzo, former residents of Hertford.

Please include this in your paper next week. Someone will stop by the pick up the picture if it is returnable. Please contact Mary Long at 426-5354. If you have any questions.
