Projects should work in cooperation with other community projects, should have low administrative costs and since it would be receiving help from a church group, it should in some way exemplify the teachings of Christianity.

idea nicely:
O Lord,
I'm matched with someone I don't know,
For a year (which seems like a long time),
For 52 meeting dates (which seems like a lot),
For over 200 hours (which seems to be half my life),
And For What?
That my youth might do just a little bit better at home, in school, and in our community—
Give me the patience and perseverance to last the course and make the difference so that in the long run, a truly upright citizen shall come forth to the glory of Your Name. Amen

The Partners With Youth program works to alleviate the community problem of juvenile delinquency in Perquimans and Chowan counties and in this regard, Pamela Lineberger, associate director of the Conference Council, states "we are glad to offer assistance to the much needed endeavors of your project".
Criteria used by the North Carolina Conference Council on Youth Ministries to determine grant recipients require that projects encourage continued positive social change, spiritual growth, and community improvement and that they provide

While the criteria are quite stringent, Partners With Youth does fulfill its conditions. The program, matching adult volunteers with court referred youths, requires that these volunteers be true role models, true good examples who follow the policy of "honesty is the only policy" rather than that "honesty is the best policy". Precisely because they are role models, they must be matched according to sex and race. Their function is to develop a sharing-caring one-on-one relationship between themselves and their youths - a relationship which is of prime importance in the work of all churches. The 'Volunteer's Prayer' expresses the

Post office to reduce retail services

The Postal Service announced the cutback in retail window service hours and a change in Sunday operations in an effort to reduce operating expenses. These adjustments result from the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, which mandates cuts in postal operational spending of $430 million and $815 million in capital commitments during the next 20 months.

Local adjustments mirror those taking place nationwide as the Postal Service strives to meet the budget requirements. Only one-third of the operational savings will come from service that directly affects customers. Two-thirds will come from internal cutbacks in training, purchase of supplies and services and other administrative expenses.

Of the operational adjustments taking place locally, two will have visible impact: The elimination of mail collection and mail processing on Sunday and the reduction in window service hours.

The Hertford Post Office will reduce retail services hours an average of 10 percent in low-usage periods starting February 13, according to D.C. Burch, Sr., Postmaster. However, the move will not affect caller service and parcel pick-up service at those facilities.

To help customers deal with the reduction in window service hours, several options have been introduced or expanded during the past two years to increase customer convenience: lobby vending equipment, self-service postal units, Stamps by Mail, Postal contract stations, expanded hours at selected area facilities and the stamps by consignment program, which allows commercial retailers to offer stamps at regular postal prices.

Following is a list of the new retail window hours for this area:
Monday - Friday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday - Closed.
