Navy releases restricted waters

USPS 428-080

Volume 58, No. 34

According to an announcement made last Thursday by Albemarle Commission officials, the Navy has agreed to delete a restricted area of water south of Perquimans County in the Albemarle Sound, and an airspace flying route which runs over Washington, Tyrrell, and Dare counties.

Don Flowers, Albemarle Com-mission Executive Director, re-ceived a round of applause following the announcement at last week's commisssion meeting.

Flowers told members of the commission gathered at the meeting Thursday evening, that for the last year the commission's Military Activities Committee has been working on getting the areas of airspace deleted by the Navy.

The Navy has agreed to release six square miles of restricted water near the Harvey Point Defense Testing Installation. "That area has been restricted to boaters for the past 30 years or more," stated Flowers, adding that he hopes the area will open for boaters in the immediate future.

Lifting restrictions on the area will provide numerous benefits for the area according to Flowers. Boaters will now be able to travel from Hertford to Edenton without having to go out into the Albemarle Sound, and regattas will now be possible.

"The Navy thought the restricted waters belonged to Harvey Point, and Harvey Point officials said it was not theirs," said Flowers, explaining the reason why the area was not currently being used and was not deleted in the past. Other benefits from the deletion will include reducing the number of low flying aircraft over Columbia, Roper and Creswell, as well as other parts of Washington, Tyrrell, and Dare counties.

Flowers stated on Thursday that the commission is also working to have the Navy delete two prohibited water areas in the Currituck Sound, which are also not currently in use by the military.

30 CENTS Commissioners vote to expand tri-county jail

Construction of an addition to the tri-county Albemarle District Jail got the nod Monday night at a joint meeting of county commissioners from Pasquotank, Perquimans, and Camden counties.

For over a year members of the jail commission, a group composed of commissioners from all three counties, have been discussing the construction of additional jail facilities due to overcrowded conditions, and increase inmate population. During that time the projected costs of the project have risen from $500,000 to $3.2 million.

Cost of the new jail facilities will be split between the counties based on their population. Pasquotank, with the highest population, will pay 65 percent of the project, or $861,650; Perquimans, will pay 22 percent, or $291,600, and Camden will pay 13.31 percent, or $172,300.

"We don't have any choice, but to build," said Perquimans County Commissioner Lester Simpson during the meeting.

Other commissioners from all three counties issued his sentiments, and many stated that they felt costs for the project would only continue to rise if expansion of the jail is delayed.

All three of the counties have money set aside for the jail project. The monies set aside by the counties were based on earlier projected costs, but all three counties will have to budget money again next year to meet their share of the project funding.

Commissioners from all three counties also stated on Monday that the jail expansion project could not have come at a worse time, all three counties have more needs than funds, and many of the needs are felt more important by citizens than the jail.

The jail expansion project will increase inmate housing by 24 maximum security cells. According to jail officials the jail is often filled now to capacity, and the new cells are needed.

Aubrey Ownley, Sr., superinten-dent of the jail, stated on Monday that at the present time he had three men sleeping on the floor, making for very unsatisfactory conditions. Ownley also stated that despite overcrowding if he receives an order he must take a prisoner no matter what the conditions

Several commissioners present at the meeting stated that our jail is not unique with its overcrowding problem. "It's happening all over the state,"said Bill Owens of Pasquotank County. Following Monday's meeting, Noel Coltrain, architect for the project, was to award contracts.

Work is set to begin on the site within three weeks.

In some sections of Hertford, residents were without power for five hours while repairs were being completed, and traffic was rerouted to avoid the area

Chief Marshall Merritt of the Hertford Police Department said the truck was driving on South Church making a delivery to Eagles Department Store at 2:30 p.m.. The truck caught a sagging phone line on its trailer as it passed. The phone line was sag"It snatched everything down," Chief Merritt stated, adding that one of the telephone poles was broken in half. He said the truck had driven the same route through town every week, but extreme heat on Thursday caused the line to sag.

Damage to the trailer was estimated at $1,000. Mayor Bill Cox estimates that damage to the electrical lines including labor and materials is $655. Damage estimates have not yet been made for the downed telephone lines and cable lines.

According to Mayor Bill Cox electricity was cut off immediately didn't receive power until 7:30 p.m.

The street was closed off by police, and traffic diverted, and according to Chief Merritt the extreme heat Thursday made for a very long, hot day. Merritt stated that several citizens brought police and workers refreshments, of which he was very appreciative. "It was a hot day to be in the sun," said Merritt.

Cable television workers, phone company workers, and town employees worked jointly to repair the downed lines.

Concerns aired over boat ramp useage

HERTFORD: It was supposed to be a public hearing to discuss park-ing concerns and the use of the boat ramp behind the municipal building, but much of the discussion concerned alleged overfishing of the Perquimans River by bass fishermen

More than 35 people attended the hearing held last Wednesday eve-ning at the Perquimans County courthouse.

"Several months ago, we were approached by a group of residents concerned that the boat ramp and parking lot are being overused and there was some concern that the river is being overfished," Mayor Bill Cox told the crowd. "What we would like to do is find a way so everyone can use the boat ramp and parking lot, but not abuse it."

A proposed ordinance presented to the council by town attorney, Walter Edwards, would limit the number of tournaments utilizing the ramp to eight each year, and no more than two tournaments could be held during a calendar month. A permit would be required along with a tournament fee of $100.00. "We have looked at some rules and regulations, but we haven't of-ficially put any in place," Cox said, adding that the council may have to compromise with the regulations in the proposed ordinance.

Jerry Felty, a Perquimans County resident and member of the N.C. Bass Federation, said many local residents have the wrong per-ception of bass tournament fishermen. "We want you to look at us differently," he said. " Not like a motorcycle gang has come to town.

Felty said tournament fishermen release fish after the tournament. 'As a group we catch all the fish we can catch, eat all the fish we can eat, and we put the rest back, he said, adding that 99 percent of the fish caught are released. Any that die in the live wells are eaten, he said.

"The fish taken out of this river couldn't feed this group in this room," said Chris Martin, a member of the Pembroke Bass Club in Edenton. "Limiting the number of tournaments is not the answer. Maybe part of the solution is to have all the weigh-ins at Missing Mill Park," he said, adding that bass fishing is one of the fastest growing sports in the country and the number of fishermen in the area will only increase in the future

Ervin Mansfield, one of the roup that first requested action by the council, said the purpose of the local residents was not to keep peo-ple out of Hertford. "Our purpose is conservation," he said. " Our river is one of the cleanest and most scenic in North Carolina, and we want to keep it that way," he said, adding that the

the river is being overfished.

Eldon Winslow, a former game warden in Perquimans, called for the establishment of spawning areas in which fishermen would not be allowed to fish in the spring. He said when fisherman catch a bass out of a spawning area and release it at the boat ramp in Hertford, the bass will not return to spawn.

Council members said the only control they have is over the use of the ramp and parking area, not the fishing in the river.

Local resident, Murray Dail, said there is plenty of parking space in the town at other areas, which could be used for tournaments and he said limiting the number of tournaments is not necessary. "We can't get too much business in Hertford," he said.

Other suggestions included not limiting the number of tournaments, but making sure that two tournaments are not held on the same day by requiring reserva-tions. Elizabeth City resident, Jim Sawyer suggested that fishermen be charged a fee to use the ramp and the proceeds could be used to build another ramp in the town.

Several of the sport fishermen suggested that everyone in the room work together to preserve the fishing resources in the Perqui-mans River. " It is a natural resource we all have to share," said Martin. "We need to unite as a group. Not, I blame you and you blame me."

The Hertford Town Council made no decisions at Wednesday's hearing, but will discuss the issue again at an upcoming council meeting.

Hot dogs and hamburgers will be on sale at a sidewalk cafe beginning at 12:00 p.m., and beginning at 5:00 p.m. Chicken plates will go on sale for the evening meal. Plates will be $3.50 and will feature fried chicken with all the trimmings.

After a delicious chicken dinner, festival goers will be treated to a new event at this year's festival, an old fashioned "mellerdrammer" Beginning promptly at 7:00 p.m. "Curse You Jack Dalton" will presented in the courthouse. The play will feature local performers of Perquimans County, and will be directed by Ed Allen.

On Saturday, the festival activities will move to Missing Mill Park in Hertford.

Booths featuring all types of arts and crafts and food items will be spread along the beautiful banks of the Perquimans River beginning at 10:00 a.m.

36 craftsmen featuring everything from toll painting to face painting have signed up for the festival. Many of the craftsman will be visiting the Indian Summer Fes-tival for the first time, and from the looks of their offerings it will be a Christmas shoppers paradise. 12 food booths are currently
