Social security and 'notch babies'

The term "notch" refers to the differences in Social Security benefits paid to people born after 1916, especially those born between 1917 and 1921, and those paid to people born before then.

According to Horace B. Deets, Executive Director, American Association of Retired Persons, "The problem is not that some beneficiaries were short-changed, but rather that another group, the 'bonanza babies,' received an unintended windfall."

Commissioner Gwendolyn S. King of the Social Security Administration suggested the notch baby issue can be compared to a malfunctioning automatic teller machine that is dispensing $20 bills when it is supposed to be giving out $5 bills. The first few people get this windfall cash bonus until the machine is repaired, and the remaining people in line get the $5 bills they are supposed to be receiving.

Should the bank machine be broken again to give everybody in line the same extra cash that a few others received in error? That would be the effect of the legislation now pending in Congress that allegedly "fixes" the notch. "There's nothing to fix because there's nothing broken," said Commissioner King.

The "notch" originated in 1972 when Congress passed a law providing automatic cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security recipients. The law's formula was flawed and provided benefits that increased faster than either wages or the cost of living.

Many retirees, under this formula, would have eventually collected more each year in Social Security benefits than they earned while they were working. This threatened the solvency of the Social Security system.

Congress corrected the problem in 1977. The 1977 legislation:

- brought benefits back into line with their intended levels;
- allowed the retirees who were already receiving the overly generous benefits to continue receiving them; and
- provided for a transition period for people born between 1917 and 1921 that allowed these people to receive benefits under either the new, correct formula that applies to everyone born after 1916, or under a special transition formula- whichever provides higher benefits.

It is understandable that notch babies who think that they are being shortchanged are angry. Fueling this anger are direct-mail fund-raising groups that mislead senior citizens about the notch.

"The notch babies are told to sign petitions, send checks, and write their congressional representatives to correct an alleged miscarriage of justice that does not exist," said Commissioner King. Later the Commissioner said that these fund-raising groups were creating a "myth" for their own "financial gain."
