Library gears up for National Children's Book Week events

JERI OLTMAN

Perquimans County Librarian

We have lots of new books, plenty of programs, several displays, and tons of thank-yous to mention. Where shall I begin?

In the THANK YOU arena, I would like to acknowledge all the donations in memory of Lucy Whedbee that we have received so far. Donors include Mr. and Mrs. John Biggers, Helene Nixon, Betty and John Crawford, Marjory O. Brodie, Anne S. McMullan and Elizabeth P. Jones, Elizabeth Thach, Betty Thompson, Paula P. Hu-Pitzer, and Henry and Bettie Stokes.

I have fallen behind on acknowledging memorial donations. Here are more contributions: in memory of Esther Evans from Marjory O. Brodie; in memory of Vernie O. Covington from Billie Carole Carver; in honor of Clyde Edison Harris, Joseph H. Stallings, and William Ray White from Charles T. Skinner Jr.; in honor of Willard Baker from Clark D. Baker; in memory of Mary Perry from Mr. and Mrs. N. Paul Gregory Jr.

If I have overlooked a contribution, I am truly sorry.

Currently we have on display at the library a selection of resources about diabetes in recognition of November as National Diabetes Month. Around our cornucopia is a display of books purchased with the 1999 Project Tomorrow grant funds we were awarded by the North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources, for which we are very thankful.

In the display case we have "Books Add Color to Your Life" to encourage young people to read. In the children's room a table arrangement is devoted to "Books About the Underground Railroad."

On top of the large print shelving are our newest large print additions, including Stuart Woods' Orchid Beach, Nancy Thayer's Between Husbands & Friends, and the bestselling Yesterday I Cried by Iyanla Vanzant.

Programs scheduled for November have included a patriotic-themed presentation sponsored by the Friends of the Library on Nov. 9 and "Let's Talk Diabetes" with Gwen Rogerson on Nov. 10. The library will be closed for Veterans Day on Nov. 11.

In recognition of National Children's Book Week we're having two birthday parties. At 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 18, Amber Brown's birthday party will begin in the children's room. Henry Reed's birthday party will be held in another part of the library.

The parties are for children ages 8 - 11 and their parents. Just in case you were wondering, Amber and Henry are fictional characters in novels for youngsters. There will be a variety of activities for our young party-goers and birthday cake, too.

Also during National

Children's Book Week we'll be having a drawing for children's books. Communities in Schools of Perquimans County has generously donated several books for us to give away.

We have received several new books, both fiction and non-fiction.

Hope to see you soon!
