Farm bill forum set

Mount Olive College will hold a forum on Oct. 17 concerning the implementation of the 2002 Farm Bill.

Don Scott, director of the Agribusiness Center at Mount Olive College and coordinator of the event, said the purpose of the forum is to share information with those who are impacted by the rules and regulations of the 2002 Farm Bill. He noted that federal and state leaders who have responsibility for implementation of agricultural, conservation, rural development, and education programs will present the latest information on the impact of the 2002 Farm Bill on their programs.

The event will kickoff at 9:15 a.m. in the Lois K. Murphy Regional Center with a reception and registration. The forum will convene at 9:50 a.m. First on the agenda will be a discussion of the political environment surrounding the development and passage of the bill, followed by an overview of the bill's effects on cotton, cereal grains, and peanuts, as well as conservation programs.

The 2002 Farm Bill Implementation Forum is free and open to the public. For more information or to pre-register, contact Don Scott at 919-658-7510.

Mount Olive College is a private, liberal arts institution dedicated to the total development of its students in an environment nurtured by Christian values.  A man sat in my office crying. He told me his wife was dying of cancer and he needed to talk to someone. He thought that I, as a funeral director, would understand his tears and not see them as a sign of weakness. Many men struggle with their grief. They think they should be able to handle it. But the tensions inside need to be released. You need never apologize for your tears.
