and 12 part time employees. The new facility will allow the company to add one more full time and six part time employees by 2013.

The Hertford distribution center will serve Northeast North Carolina from the Outer Banks to Williamston. The new center is expected to be operational by July.

William Ronalter, manager with Hertford Baseline Development, indicated that local incentives were a key factor in FedEx's decision to relocate within the county.

"This is a great example of a distribution company and a development company working closely with the county and region to bring economic development and land improvement to the area," said Dave Goss, economic development consultant for Perquimans County. "We first learned of this lead from Ray White, vice president of marketing for the Northeast Commission, and we will continue to work collectively to bring jobs and investment to the area."

"North Carolina's Northeast Region is primed for expansion and location of distribution and logistics companies like FedEx Ground," stated Vann Rogerson, president/CEO of North Carolina's Northeast Commission. "Our roadways are finally becoming functional for transporting and distributing goods, and this will enable us to continue to diversify the economy and expand the capacity for new jobs."

Perquimans County leaders agreed to reimburse Baseline a portion of the land cost as an incentive. That reimbursement is based on the amount of taxable investment in the building upon completion.

Reimbursement is based on a sliding fee scale. Baseline's investment in the building has to be at least $500,000 to qualify for the lowest incentive of 25 percent. A $3 million investment qualifies for 100 percent reimbursement.

The town of Hertford also added an incentive package since the Commerce Center is located within the town limits. While the county's incentive package is a one-time deal, the town's incentive payments are spread over a period of five years, but requires the facility to stay in operation for 10 years.

Property taxes must be paid in order for both the town and county to reimburse Baseline.

A.R. Chesson will construct the facility.
