The Proper Plan of Life Insurance Conduct,

The point to which the conduct of life insurance companies must come is plainey this-that they must be so conducted as to forbid their officers or directors from making profit or neome in any form their relation to the company except the reasonable (and not excessive) salaries that they receive. They must be forbidden to use the companies' money (which is the policyholders') in any way that will directly or indirectly bring a penny of income to them

This is the plane of safety and of right, high conduct (and it is the only plane of safety and high conduct) to which the aroused moral sense of the community demands that the business shall be elevated. The sharing by directors in syndicate profits, their conduct (with their companies' money) of subsidiary or friendly trust companies- the era of these Directors of life insurance companies must be chosen from among a different class of men than brokers and bankers and speculators. This is the plain lesson that all plain duty to which they point. The complete confidence of the whole change is made.-Worlds Works.

Wounds, Bruises and Burns. By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principal. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any dangers of blood poisoing. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save your time and money, not to mention the inconconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by J. E. Shell
