'Find And Feed' Goes Full Speed

RALEIGH -- Project "Find and Feed" will be going full speed across North Carolina in February according to Dr. Renee Westcott, director of the Division of Social Services of the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

The project is a statewide effort with several thousand volunteers working to make sure that all low income North Carolinians know about the food assistance programs available to them through their local social services departments.

Early in 1973, a Select Senate Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs gave North Carolina a poor rating in comparison with other states because of only 30% participation of the poor in food assistance programs.

"I expect our 'Find and Feed' effort will add 30 to 40 thousand more recipients to our food assistance programs by spring," states John Kerr head of the Food Assistance Branch of the Division of Social Services.

Eight meetings are being held across the state this week with some 300 volunteer leaders and federal, state and county representatives to discuss the techniques to be used in the project.

"We are going to do our best to see that everyone in North Carolina is informed of what the food programs can do for them. There are about 600,000 eligible North Carolinians and with rising food prices, the opportunity to use food stamps or obtain supplemental food through the Commodity Program is vital to them for adequate nutrition," stated Dr. Westcott.

Volunteer leaders will be furnished pamphlets, leaflets, and advice on techniques and ways to reach those eligible at the eight meetings. They will also be issued a quantity of such supplies to give to their volunteers across the state who will be canvassing low income families.

The Food Stamp Program which allows low-income families to exchange comparatively small sums of money for food coupons worth much more at the grocers, is now the hard thinking and operated in 75 North Carolina counties.

Getting It Together!
by Shella King

Today the world is a ball of confusion. There is so much going on these days. God and that there is a heaven somewhere. It will about a shortage of help you through your everything; gas, food, troubles in the darkest paper, etc. There is a problem everywhere you look. We have troubles in our government, in the air (pollution), on the ground we live on. I surely hope there's a heaven somewhere.

In the time in which we live, we should believe in the worship service. It is the best thing to do to make it through.

Viet adoption study begun

NEW YORK -- A team from the Interagency Vietnamese Adoption Committee will shortly visit Saigon to gather information on about 500 institutionalized children of mixed Vietnamese and black American parentage. The committee, an arm of the Agency for International Development, plans to develop adoption resources among minority Americans for those for whom this is the best plan. The Saigon delegation will also review government and voluntary services for mixed-race children.

Last week was not a week one would want to remember at Asheboro High School. It was the week of mid-term exams. Now students are about to recover from the hard thinking and studying. We're hoping now for good results.

In spite of exams, Asheboro High's basketball team, The Comets, are coming on strong. They defeated Trinity Friday night, Jan. 18, in Asheboro. This makes the Comets' 4th conference win of the year. Four out of eight games won.

These are the names of the great and talented players on the Asheboro team: Len Barnes, Alan Parker, Randy Henderson, Ronnie Pugh, Gary Allred, Dwight McCall, Dough Shiftlet, Graylin Brown, Mark Weston, Chris McKinnon, Greg Cranford, Doug Pugh, and the coach, Mr. Akin.

Our community was saddened by the sudden death of Mr. Odell Richard Foust, 53, of 803 Frank St. Mr. Foust, son of the late Herbert and Emma Foust, died early Sunday morning at his home following many years of declining health. He was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church and was active until his health failed. A graduate of Asheboro Central High School, he was a veteran of World War II and was employed by Randolph Hospital, Inc. for twenty-five years.
