The emphasis, as last year, will continue to be on a Tri-College Financial Campaign to gather funds for Livingstone, Clinton and Lomax-Hannon Colleges. The Quadrennium 1972-76 financial rallies which opened at Livingstone College last year, this year rotates to Clinton, to Lomax-Hannon next year, and will end in what is expected by the denomination to be a massive observance as it swings back to the

What with ever-rising food prices, it's important to get the most for your grocery dollar. For most families, from 22 to 31 cents out of every $1 is spent on something to go on the table. What that money buys should be nutritious, tasty and economical.

Most of us eat too much, so a good way to cut down on costs is to slowly get your family into the habit of eating just what they need, and controlling snacks between meals. The practice of eating all day is not only unhealthy, it's expensive.

Here are some tips to follow when shopping for food:

1. Shop alone if possible. (Try to swap babysitting chores with a neighbor.)
2. Shop only once a week, or less.
3. Eat before you shop.
4. Stick to your shopping list, based on menus you've planned in advance.
5. Buy specials only if you can use it, or substitute something already on your list. If you don't eat it, a special is a waste of money.
6. Keep "junk" food to a minimum; they add up.
7. Buy fresh fruits and vegetables in season.

Fellows Program At A&T

GREENSBORO — The A&T State University Fellows program, a funded project designed to identify young leaders for the nation's social, economic and political sectors, is looking for some friends in North Carolina.

Students selected for the program have spent their past two summers working for such dignitaries as Rep. Richardson Preyer, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, Rep. Henry Frye, and for some of the nation's largest industries.

"But now we need more internships in North Carolina," said Dr. William Parker, director of the project. "We would like for our students to gain the experience of interacting with some of our outstanding leaders in this state."

The A&T program is funded by the North Carolina Fellows Program Inc. and operates through A&T, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Davidson College, North Carolina State University and the Smith Richardson Foundation.

Careful Screening

The Fellows are selected after a careful screening and spend most of the academic year traveling and meeting informally with national and state officials.

"It's the greatest learning experience possible," added Parker. Funds for the travel and guest lecturers are born by the North Carolina Fellows Program.

Some of the Fellows attended the Black National Political Convention, some have met personally with the Rev. Jesse Jackson, national civil rights leader, and Dr. James Farmer, the founder of the Congress for Racial Equality.

Parker said firms desiring to provide internships next summer, may contact him at A&T. The students are required to participate in an internship experience.

A&T Professor Presents Paper At 1st International Assembly

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA — The chairman of the Department of mechanical engineering at A&T State University has been selected to represent the United States at the first special assembly of the International Association of Meteorology and Atmospheric Physics, currently convening here.

He is Dr. Suresh Chandra, presented a major technical paper last week, in the area of pollution studies.

Chandra's paper was entitled "Correlation of Hay-Pasquill Scale Parameter Experimental Results."

The investigation is concerned with his examination of various theories and experiments explaining turbulent boundary layer diffusion. Chandra said results of the study could help to establish the significance to air pollution problems of the Hay-Pasquill scale parameter, which relates various scales of turbulence.

Chandra already has to his credit extensive research and publications in the fields of atmospheric diffusion and heat transfer.
