Counties To Study Juvenile Needs

men expect others to announce their participation following January county commissioners' meetings.

Rep. Tally said that legislation passed by the 1975 General Assembly makes it illegal for children who have committed no criminal offense to be sent to the state's training schools. This makes it imperative, she said, that plans be made for facilities and programs within the counties.

Rep. Tally defined status offenders as "those children who have hurt no-one but themselves."

"We believe that community programs can provide an atmosphere more conducive to rehabilitation than state training schools -- and at a lesser cost to the taxpayer," she said.

To maintain a child in the state institution for a year, she said, costs approximately $10,000, while keeping a child in a group home or foster home in his community costs approximately half that much.

Other community programs that counties might provide include alternate schools and individual counseling programs.

"I do not think people want to send children in trouble away from their community," Rep. Tally said. "It's just that in the past there have been few local resources to turn to. Too often judges have had no choice other than probation or training school."

Rep. Tally said that January is the deadline for counties to announce their intention of participating.

"After January," she said, "we hope to have enough information so that we can look at the needs of all the counties, discuss the priorities and get legislation read for the 1977 Session of the General Assembly."

Counties taking part in the program will get technical assistance from the Department of Human Resources.

The 1975 legislation which formed the Technical Advisory Committee, requires that counties wishing to participate in the program submit evidence of a needs study in January 1976 and a report of preliminary findings by January, 1977.

Counties which have already responded and announced their intention of participating include: Anson, Ashe, Avery, Buncombe, Burke, Caldwell, Chatham, Cherokee, Clay, Columbus, Dare, Davidson, Davie, Duplin, Durham, Edgecomb, Guilford, Halifax, Harnett, Haywood, Henderson, Johnston, Jones, Lee, Lenoir, Lincoln, Macon, Madison, Martin, McDowell, Mecklenburg, Mitchell, Montgomery, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Orange, Pender, Polk, Robeson, Rutherford, Scotland, Stanly, Transylvania, Tyrrell, Union, Vance, Washington, Watauga, Wilson and Yancey.

SADIE'S CORNER

(Tips To The Ladies)

Dear Sadie:

The other day I was taken by surprise when a married man that I talk to sometimes asked me for a date and other involvements with him. It made me feel very low, and I wondered what made him think I was that type of woman. What kind of answer should I give him?

Dear Unsigned:

Your answer should be no of course since he is a married man. It is not necessary for you to feel low because of his asking you for a date and other involvements. Anytime a man is attracted to a woman, the woman should feel flattered. It is important to know how to refuse a man in a way as not to hurt his manly pride but let your answer be definite in a nice way. A lot of women feel insulted when a man makes a pass at them but that is the wrong time to feel insulted. A woman should feel insulted when she feels that she is looking her best and no man gives her a second look.
