Soul Train's Coming Attraction

The Staple Singers, riding the crest of success as a result of their recent collaboration with Curtis Mayfield on the film soundtrack, 'Let's Do It Again,' appear with Bobby Womack on Soul Train next Saturday.
The versatile family group, which sings everything from gospel to pop music delight listeners with 'Funky Love,' 'A Whole Lot of Love' and 'Let's Do It Again,' which was recently certified gold.
Pop Roebuck Staples and daughters Cleo, Yvonne and Mavis debuted as a gospel group in Chicago in the fifties and since then have attained an international following through their appearances on stage, screen and records:
Soul Train host, Don Cornelius, also welcomes back contemporary soul-rock star Bobby Womack who delivers 'Where

There's A Will There's A Way' and 'Daylight.'
A protege of the late Sam Cooke, with whom he traveled as guitarist, Womack is also a songwriter having composed the soundtrack for the film 'Across 110th Street.'

The Soul Train dancers keep the pace lively with their fancy stepping down the Soul Train line. Produced by Cornelius. Soul Train is sponsored by Johnson Products Co of Chicago, manufacturers of hair care products and cosmetics.

Expressions In Poetry

by WILLIAMS M. RUCKER

IF I COULD
If I could fly away on a blissful plane of imagination, that wouldn't be enough.
If I could pretend that life is a never-ending carousel, that wouldn't be enough.
Oh! If I could stretch out on a divan of security and not worry about falling off, that wouldn't be enough.
But if I could reach into your heart and loosen that string of discord, that would be more than enough.
If I could live a million decades without longevity affecting me, that wouldn't be enough.
But...if I could help you to see the fallacies and the beauty of this life; then, that would be more than enough.

SADIE'S CORNER

(Tips To The Ladies)

Sadie, I married very young to the only man I had ever been involved with and now we are separated. I am not use to other men and I am afraid of being used and not knowing how to handle myself. I have children and I want to live respectfully. Can you give me some suggestions. Mrs. A.

Dear Mrs. A., The first thing you need to do is build up some self confidence. Do not rush into another relationship. Take your time and select a nice man that will respect you and your children. I would suggest that you accept invitations for dining, dancing and all outside activities. Do not get in to the slump of cooking at your house. You have just gotten out of an unhappy marriage so drop the role of acting like a wife. Do not let any man you date use your house as a stop spot for food and television. You should set your rules and regulations for your dating, have things arranged that will not interfere with you being a good mother. Your dates should know that your children have to be considered. Try not to show your inexperience and most of all do not related that the only man you were ever involved with was your ex-spouse. A lot of separated women ruin good dates by conversing about their unhappy marriage, this is definitely a "No No". Talk of happy subjects and things that you want to do. Have good principles for a decent way of life and abide by them and you can enjoy your role as being a separated woman, that is free to date her selected choice.
