"I write because I'm trying to express something that's in me, and I actually hear it that way."

Andrae Crouch

Grammy Award winner Andrae Crouch and The Disciples will appear in concert for a special anniversary celebration Thursday evening, April 1, at 8 p.m. at the Piedmont Sports Arena in Greensboro. Andrae Crouch and The Disciples, who received the 1976 Grammy Award for best soul gospel performance, are a seasoned blend of rock, gospel, jazz and soul. Each Disciple in the eight year old band is deeply religious, and it is that spiritual foundation that Andrae claims is their driving force.

What began as three friends getting together to sing at a Los Angeles church, has blossomed into the nation's Top Soul Gospel group, according to Billboard Magazine's latest poll. Andrae Crouch and the Disciples are not new to the national music stage. Seven talented performers comprise the tightknit, eight year old band whose common gospel faith and incredible talent ignite concerts with explosive enthusiasm. More often than not today, Andrae Crouch's seasoned blend of rock, gospel, jazz and soul is performed in ecstatic SRO auditoriums. Love and enthusiasm reign and no toe can resist the infectious AC&D beat.

In 1967, bass player-vocalist Bill Theford, tenor Perry Morgan, and Andrae Crouch, who plays piano and sings lead, formed the original Disciples. They were singing for their own enjoyment, but a reputation quickly spread. Requests for personal appearances began to come in and Andrae humbly accepted them, never thinking of the success and popularity they were later to have. Then as now, songs carry a message of personal experience. Andrae elaborates by saying, "I don't write in order to do a particular style. I write because I'm trying to express something that's in me, and I actually hear it that way." He goes on, "Music has such a big power over people. It speaks to them directly in their minds and hearts. That's the whole secret about music. It heals and uplifts. I'm writing as a spokesman for the Lord, saying the words He would be saying if He were in our place." Each Disciple is deeply religious and wholly gives credit to Jesus Christ for the talent, and though they are proud of their achievements, they are still uncomfortable with the recognition success has brought. "As long as folks see our talent as God's gift, we are happy," smiles Andrae.

Movement Education Workshop At WSSU

WINSTON-SALEM—A workshop in Movement Education will be conducted by movement specialist Maya B. Doray on Wednesday, March 31 in Whitaker Gymnasium on the WSSU campus. Doray has specialized in teaching children through a creative approach, relating movement not only to dance and movement education in general but also to learning abilities for teaching academic subjects. She believes that movement-exploration can become a tremendous aid in the development and improvement of learning skills. She has stated that by using Creative Movement and Dance as a teaching tool, academic subjects become a challenge and are fun for children while they learn through total involvement. The workshop sessions of lectures and demonstrations are scheduled to begin at 9:00 a.m. Students from Forest Park Elementary School will participate in the demonstrations. Local teachers and student teachers have been invited to attend the workshop.

The workshop will be sponsored by the Scholastic Achievement Program at Winston-Salem State University in conjunction with the Departments of Education and Health and Physical Education. For additional information call 761-2117.

SADIE'S CORNER

(Tips To The Ladies)

Dear Sadie,

I have seen so unhappy marriages, that it makes me hesitate to seriously think of marriage for myself. How can a person be sure that he selecting the right partner?

Unsure

Dear Unsure,

This is a very difficult question to answer, therefore, I will just give you some pointers on the selecting of a good partner. First you must be sure that you are mature enough to take on the responsibility of marriage. Both persons should be cooperative; have kindly attitudes towards others; enjoy activities that bring educational and pleasurable opportunities for each other; have conservative attitudes and most of all be willing to save and be cautious in money matters. But there are sometimes when even these points may not help a marriage survive if it lacks love and respect. So for any person that is willing to give marriage a try, must be willing to put one hundred per cent of himself into the partnership.
