Negro To Face Murder Charge In Knife Death

Woman Is Fatally Slashed; Man Is Held In Jail

Joseph, 45, alias Joseph Clever, Negro, of 1010 West McCulloch street, was being held in the city jail last night without bond on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal stabbing shortly after midnight Saturday of Ella Cooks, 36, of 1103 West McCulloch street.

Police said Joseph was arrested at Pomona yards about 4 a. m. Sunday by L. B. O'Quinn, Southern railway detective, after an alarm had been sounded that the Negro was wanted in connection with the woman's death.

Taken to police headquarters Joseph allegedly told police he stabbed the woman but claimed she was trying to rob him while he was asleep.

Officers said the knife allegedly used in the slaying was found on Joseph when he was taken into custody.

Mrs. Cook, police said, was killed in Joseph's room at 1010 West McCulloch street, about 12:15 a. m. Sunday. They said her body was found lying on Joseph's bed in a pool of blood, with her throat cut.

Coroner Wallace G. Freeman examined the body and said "death was caused by an external hemorrhage from a knife wound in the throat, the knife being in the hands of Cleve Joseph, alias Joseph Clever." He said none of the stab wounds would have caused death.

Police said John Thomas, who also resides at 1010 West McCulloch street witnessed the stabbing of the woman and climbed out a window to go to a telephone and call officers to the scene but the woman was dead when police arrived and Joseph also was gone.

Police said the front door of the room in which the body was found was fastened from the inside and was forced when knocks failed to bring a response.

No date had been set last night for the preliminary hearing for Joseph Clever.

Armstrong Player At Washington Street School

The pupils from the Washington Street School were highly entertained by the Armstrong Players in the Dudley High School Auditorium on Monday afternoon, October 27. The performance was full of fun and laughter. The old magic wand was used several times to display its mystery power. Many unusual tricks were brought to light, such as changing water to wine, producing artificial flowers from magic dust and numerous others. The children left the auditorium gleefully, after having much fun.

Washington Street School Has Band

The Washington Street School has a band. It is the first elementary band to be organized in the city of Greensboro. This band assembled at the beginning of the school term and since that time the pupils have practiced diligently.

The band, under the direction of Mr. Parsons, made its initial presentation November 11 at the celebration of the Dudley homecoming.

A. AND T. BAND PARADES ON ARMISTICE DAY

The A. and T. Band, consisting of fifty or more talented students of the college dressed in appropriate uniforms paraded through the Negro business section on East Market Street, and exhibited one of the finest bands that participated in the Armistice Day Festival.

This Band is expected to be one of the feature attractions when the A. and T. Argies play the North Carolina College, for Negroes in Durham on Thanksgiving day in the annual Turkey Day Classic. The Band is under the direction of Bernard Lee Mason, who hailed from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music.

2,000 Seniors Guests of A. and T. College

Approximately 2,000 seniors of High Schools throughout the state were guests of A. and T. College on occasion of its third North Carolina High School Senior Day. It was announced last week by F. H. Melbane, registrar for the occasion.

The program, which has been adopted as an annual affair, evinces the fact that A. and T. College is ever eager to promote educational growth in the immediate community, and will more than likely influence the potential graduate to continue their education.

A carefully planned program included recreation in the college gymnasium, a plant inspection tour, and a football game between St. Paul and A. and T., which the latter won. The activities, were designed to give the senior a polygonic view of college life but were not for the purpose of encouraging students to matriculate at

Bennett Survey Reveals Many Serious Gaps

Many Subjects Are Neglected Such As Problems of Marriage

Many important and socially valuable topics are not being dealt with as a part of the regular curriculum of our women's colleges, according to the preliminary returns of a survey among women college graduates which has just been tabulated by Bennett College, and which was announced for the first time at last week's conference for youth advisers at the college.

"There are a number of areas of instruction which we have failed to deal with adequately in our curriculum," declared President David D. Jones of the college, in discussing the tentative conclusions of the study, which was undertaken several months ago, and which included data from graduates of several Negro women's colleges in addition to Bennett.

Important Subjects Omitted.

"Subjects of crucial importance in after-college life, such as techniques of job-seeking, problems of courtship and marriage, consumer education, and wholesome adult recreation, as well as methods of combatting the special social and economic problems of Negro life, are among the many topics which colleges are either omitting altogether from their courses of study, or leaving to the chance of extra-curricular effort," President Jones added. "Yet any college that is concerned with a functional program of education must, of necessity, emphasize to us, consider these areas in its curriculum."

As part of its own program of curriculum revision and functionalization, Bennett issued questionnaires last June to 500 women college graduates, in an effort to ascertain what, on the basis of their "real life" experiences, college women feel should go into college courses for Negro women. They were questioned as to whether a given area of living had been studied as part of a regular college course, or outside the regular course of study, and what items

Bennett Co-Hostess For Y. W. C. A. Conference

Students and Adult Leaders From White, Negro Colleges Meet

Approximately 40 student and adult leaders, from Negro and white colleges in the Southern Region of the Y. W. C. A. will meet in Greensboro the week-end of November 15-16, to participate in the fourth annual conference of the region, which will be held under the joint auspices of Bennett College and Guilford College for Women. The conference has been arranged by Miss Rose Mae Withers and Miss Augusta Roberts both of the southern office of the association in Richmond, with the co-operation of the student Y. W. C. A. groups at the two women's colleges.

"Christian Faith and Social Reconstruction" will be a major topic for discussion at the conference, and the delegates will also discuss specific actions of the national and regional councils, as well as how the Southern Region can participate more fully in the National Student Assembly, to be held at Oxford, O., December 27-January 3. In addition, there will be meetings of special regional committees, and individual conferences with leaders from other areas and with the national staff.

The student Y. W. C. A. is one of the most active organizations in the Bennett campus. Its officers are: President, Miss Irie Parks, '42, of High Point; vice president, Miss Hilda Amaker, '44, of High Point; corresponding secretary, Miss Dorothy Jackson, '42, of Greensboro, and financial secretary, Miss Johnetta Holloway, '43, of Durham.

should receive more emphasis, or less emphasis than they now receive.

Job-Getting, Race Adjustment Cited

Outstanding in the replies to the Bennett inquiry was the fact that less than one-fourth of the 323 respondents had learned about "How To Get a Job" as part of the regular course of study, and that less than one-third of them had received direct instruction on "How To Deal With Race Problems." Political Minded Students Busy At Dudley High

Last week was a busy one at Dudley High School for the young political minded students who went to the polls to elect a home-coming queen. The election took the form of democratic procedure used in electing our local and national officers, thus giving the students actual practice in casting votes.

There was a candidate from each semester group and they were as follows: Hazel Dorsett, Anna Richmond, Florence Amacker, Juanita Sloan, Edna Spencer, Louise Holt, Sadie Nelson and Eloise Madkins.

Campaign managers did much to boost their candidates. They were: Mary Miller, Okalen Graves, Arnesé Martin, Leonidas Nelson, Onon Amacker, Edith Shaffner and Charles Wallace.

Friday was voting day and the returns were reported at intervals over the sound system. Finally, when all the votes were counted, the lucky candidate was Sadie Nelson, a member of a seventh semester class. She resigned as Miss Dudley High at the homecoming dance between Dudley and Atkins High on November 11.
