

New Head Coach Of A. and T. College

Greensboro.—Charles U. DeBerry, a graduate of A. and T. College and New York university, who was an all-state, all-C. I. A. A. quarterback and a member of the 1927 championship A. and T. gridiron aggregation, has just been appointed head coach and director of physical education at A. and T. College, to fill the vacancy created by the resignations of R. K. Bernard and Archie Harris.

An assistant to DeBerry has not been selected as yet, but President F. D. Bluford has announced that several men are under consideration. Bernard, a former star athlete at Boston university, came to A. and T. College in 1939 as assistant to Homer Harris, former Iowa grid star, and became head coach when Harris resigned last year. Archie Harris, internationally famous track and field star, was chosen as Bernard's assistant at the beginning of the past football season. Both men are expected to get defense jobs this summer.

DeBerry, who earned his B. S. degree from A. and T. College in 1931 and his M. S. degree from New York university in 1935, resigned the principalship of Madison high school, Madison, N. C., to take the duties as head coach at A. and T. As coach of the Whiteville and Madison high schools, he compiled an enviable record of 475 wins, 37 losses and 8 ties games. Last year his basketball team at Madison high was undefeated in 27 games during the regular schedule.

Orton Cow Bred 'Long Distance'

Last fall one of the prize Jersey cows on Bald Head Island was bred by "remote control," or artificial insemination, fostered by State college at Raleigh.

Results are that there is now a beautiful heifer calf at Orton plantation with its father never having been within 200 miles of its mother.

Taught To Fear by Parents

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

THERE IS NO light in the pantry and it is nearly dark.

"I wish you would go to the pantry for some carrots," says mother. Dan starts off but soon returns with, "I'm too tired, mother."

"Now, Dan, you know you are fibbing. You are afraid. There is nothing to hurt you."

Dan is five. The mother suspecting that he was afraid should have accepted his explanation without suggesting that he was afraid or was misrepresenting the fact. She should have gone herself, or have offered him a reward.

"I have brought this girl in to you today, doctor, because she won't eat what she should. She just worries me to death. We have awful scenes at the table sometimes. She upsets the whole family. I thought you could tell me what to do."

Sylvia, seven years of age, is sitting there while her mother pictures her eating problems in great detail and describes the annoyance to the mother by the child. Sylvia never had a happier moment. She never had a more exciting discovery that she not only had been forcing the family to pay her a great deal of attention at home, but that her mother had grown desperate over her conduct.

When you go to see your doctor about the child whose conduct you wish to correct, it is wiser to leave the child at home, for the first visit at least.

You are sitting at the dinner-table and Toby drops some remarks about his teacher which suggest to you that she has done something of which you strongly disapprove. Suppose you, by a remark or gesture, indicate that you are displeased by what the teacher is alleged to have done. Then you do her an injustice making a judgment from a one-sided and, no doubt, biased testimony; you encourage your child to engage in unkind remarks about persons in their absence.

You also damage your child's character, his education, and you help to waste the tax money you have paid. If you think some things are not going right at school wait a few days until you regain your poise, and then have a word with the teacher in the child's absence. If you are a mother, be a lady; if you are a man, be a gentleman. It will pay.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My daughter in high school barely passes but studies diligently. Her textbooks are hard for her to read.

A. Read aloud most of her assignments to her and help her turn each paragraph into a few words of her own. In return for this, prevail on her to read to you or herself for fifteen minutes each evening from interesting materials of about fifth grade difficulty, in order to improve her reading skill. You may have without cost to you a copy of my "Tips to Students," by writing me in a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Life Under Hitler's "New Order"

French school teachers have been warned to teach the doctrine of a Nazi Europe or prepare to be removed from their class rooms, it is revealed in a Paris broadcast to the French people.

Abel Bonnard, Vichy minister of education, in a circular letter to all teachers in France, complained that there had been too many examples of teachers who refused to teach the "New Order" and who were openly friendly to Britain or who "hid their friendly feeling for Britain by pretended neutrality."

"From now on," the Nazi-controlled Paris radio said, "it will be easy to choose the members of the educational body. There is to be no more compromise. They must be for, or against. They must serve or leave."

Small Sawmills Exempt From Freezing Order

Small sawmills in Caldwell and neighboring counties sawing 5,000 board feet of lumber or less are no longer subject to the war production order freezing lumber, according to J. C. Baskerville, managing secretary of the chamber of commerce of Lenoir, who has just returned from Raleigh where he conferred with war production board officials.

A score or more of sawmills in Caldwell county and probably several hundred persons who make their living from logging and the operation of small sawmills in the mountains are favorably affected by this ruling.

Anti-Aircraft School About To Hit Stride

2,600 Men Will Get Commissions In Next 11 Weeks

The anti-aircraft artillery officer candidate school at Camp Davis is about to hit its stride, a stride that will send new officers in unheard of numbers into the field, it was reported recently at the school's headquarters. The school, located near Wilmington, will commission approximately 2,600 men within the next 11 weeks.

Although the school has been topping records for several weeks in the number of students graduated, the "leveling off" process is just beginning. In July, the number of graduates will reach 340 a week and from then on it will stay close to that figure.

By maintaining the 340 a week average, the establishment will meet its quota of 17,680 graduates a year, a staggering figure but one which is none too high when it is considered that the anti-aircraft command is expanding on a scale probably exceeded only by the army air corps.

Booker T. Wilson, Negro, 422 Chestnut street, was released on bond for appearance in municipal-county court after he had been arrested for having allegedly drawn a pistol on Albert Valentine, Negro, 1107 East Market street. The alleged assault took place at 295 Young street recently.

HOUSEHOLD HINT.

When you want to dry clean small articles, like ties, etc., use a large glass fruit jar. Keep the rubber ring under the lid so that no liquid gets away. Put cleaning liquid in jar, put articles in, and shake gently until they are clean.

Community Centers Seen Major Point of Recreation

Needs and Interests of Area Are Served By Active Centers

By JUNE WILSON.

Community centers in the next year will be emphasized in a recreation program as never before, since the trend is so definitely toward neighborhood and community recreation and the centers are the hub of the wheel around which the spokes representing activity rotate.

In our city of Greensboro the Glenwood community center at old Peck school and the Windsor community center on Gorrell street, serve a definite purpose, especially in this war time. The program is built around the needs and interests of an entire community representing all ages with highly varied interests.

Activities in the community centers include: Club groups of social nature and those built around hobby interests; physical and active games and sports to include such things as basketball, volley ball, ring tennis, badminton, gymnastics, group games, etc. quiet activities, such as checkers, table games, ping pong, etc.; health and first aid classes and social activities on both a group and city-wide basis. Many special events and programs occur during the community center season which runs from October until May. All these activities are adapted to special groups, times and conditions which gives the composite program a varied appeal.

Huge Attendance Noted.
In the 1941-42 center season the total attendance was 58,478 from October until May. At Glenwood center, 455 persons were registered and at Windsor community center 1,500 were registered. Special events at Glenwood included the opening, three community sings, Christmas program and May day with a total attendance of 1,200. At Windsor center the special events attendance was 18,930 at 160 scheduled special activities.

With additional strain on workers in all professions as well as women in the home and children in school it is important that a place is provided where relaxation and joy can be evidenced. It is the consensus of army and navy officials and those concerned with civilian morale that recreation is as vital to the public as health measures and as important as any part of the war effort.

HITLER TO THE REICHSSTAG—APRIL 26:

"When I was speaking to you last time, the east was being enshrouded in a winter such as Europe had not witnessed even in those regions for over 140 years. In a few days the thermometer dropped from zero and above to 47 degrees below zero and more. What that means, nobody can imagine who has not lived through it himself.

When your are sending cookies to the boys in camp, try this method of keeping them moist: Pack as usual with plenty of waxed paper, but make the top layer of fresh slices of bread. The bread becomes dry, but the cookies remain fresh. This works well, even if the package has to traverse the continent.
