Judge Alley Warns Vet Law Must Be Respected

FIVE PERSONS HURT WHEN BUS OVERTURNS ON BURLINGTON ROAD.

At least five persons were painfully injured and several others sustained minor lacerations and bruises about 6 p. m. Wednesday when a 29-passenger Carolina Trailways company bus overturned off Burlington highway near Buffalo creek bridge about four miles east of the city.

Ambulances rushed to the scene, where passengers were freed from the wreckage by smashing a windshield, the doorway exit being pinned to the ground.

"There was no disorder to speak of," said Joseph F. Still, 41, of 617 North Eugene street, a front seat passenger, who sustained neck and right shoulder injuries. "We were just piled on top of one another and finally realized what had happened and scrambled out the windshield place."

The windshield he referred to was the right front section of the bus smashed by Still's front seat companion, W. E. Hinshaw, 48, of 129 Bishop street, who was injured about the head, right leg and right knee. Both were patients last night at Piedmont Memorial hospital.

Also at the hospital was Frank Huckabee, 42, Y. M. C. A., Binswinger Glass company employee who sustained bruised and undetermined injury to the right shoulder and right hip.

Patients at L. Richardson hospital, victims of the accident, Wednesday night were Cristobel Smith, 23, Liberty, route 1, and Naomi Haith, 42, Gibsonville, whose injuries were undetermined.

Hinshaw said the bus was approaching an incline and was meeting two large trucks, one of which was in the center lane, facing the bus. He stated further that the bus driver turned to the right to avoid colliding with the truck and the bus apparently skidded and overturned.

State highway patrolmen reported the driver, Robert Lewis Guffey, 22, of 1509 Nineteenth street, had just rounded a curve and the bus began skidding 75 yards west of the bridge, overturning after traveling 90 feet. They quoted the driver as saying that the bus turned over on its top and then to the side.

Investigation of the accident was continued Thursday, patrolmen said.

A Carolina Trailways bus, shown above, overturned early Wednesday night on Burlington road near Buffalo creek bridge, four miles east of the city. Passengers, excepting five, escaped with only minor injury. They crawled out of the right front windshield shattered by kicks from W. E. Hinshaw, 129 Bishop street, who was in one of the front seats. Windows on the right side were smashed in overturning.

T. L. Dixon, Ex-Soldier, Draws Road Sentence

Judge Felix E. Alley, Waynesville, speaking from the bench at Wednesday afternoon's session of Guilford Superior court, voiced the warning that "soldiers returning home, whether or not they have an honorable discharge cannot be permitted to take the law into their own hands."

Expressing himself as having "all the sympathy in the world" for returning servicemen and consequently finding it doubly hard to punish them, the judge made his statement prior to postponing judgment until Wednesday in the case against Lorenthaus T. Dixon, ex-soldier, against whom a jury returned verdict of guilty of aiding and abetting assault with a deadly weapon.

Charges against Dixon grew out of his alleged participation in the assault of John Hansberry, Southern railway porter for 43 years, when Hansberry refused Dixon's brother, William Harrison Dixon, entry to a crowded northbound train.

The state attempted to prove that the defendant had boarded the northbound train to hit and hold Hansberry while his brother cut the porter with a knife after the plaintiff had informed them there was no room for them. The state contended that Hansberry, defenseless against the two, sustained a cut which permanently injured his hand. William Harrison Dixon, who allegedly wielded the knife, has not been arrested and his whereabouts are unknown.

Defense counsel contended that Lorenthaus Dixon hit the porter in self-defense after Hansberry had kicked at him in an effort to keep him from climbing into the car vestibule. Dixon himself was cut on the hand by the knife allegedly in the hands of his brother, who joined in the scuffle. Dixon drew 12 months.

In another action Wednesday, Willie Lee Young, entering plea of nolo contendere to two charges of manslaughter, was sentenced to two years suspended for five years, put on probation and ordered to pay the costs after he had placed himself at the court's mercy. The charge grew out of the September 6 deaths of Miss Martha Brice, a Bennett college student, and Norris Lee Headen, (Continued On Page Four)
