Alabama Schools Must End Bias Next Fall

Miss. & La. Next LDF Targets

Alabama this week became the first southern state ordered by a federal court to desegregate all its public school districts. The court ordered 99 school districts to end segregation by next fall.

This unprecedented action of the three judge federal court came in response to four years of litigation by attorneys of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc. (LDF).

Alabama Gov. Lurleen B. Wallace, State School Superintendent Ernest Stone and 10 other state officials were directed by the U. S. District Court in Montgomery to "take affirmative action to disestablish all state-enforced or encouraged public segregation."

They were also told to "eliminate the effects of past . . . discrimination."

LDF Director Counsel Jack Greenberg called the decision, "an important step in closing the doors to evasion of the Constitution and the desegregation guidelines of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

We plan to follow this up in those hard core states where massive resistance remains the order of the day, particularly Mississippi, Louisiana and S. W. Georgia," he said.

This injunction marks the first time since the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling of 1954 that an entire state has been placed under a single injunction to end segregation, Mr. Greenberg added.

The Court ruled that Gov. Wallace and other state officials have through their control and influence over local school boards flouted every effort to make the 14th amendment a meaningful reality to Negro school children in Alabama.

The Federal Court said that Gov. Wallace and other state officials had used two chief means of encouraging local Alabama school boards to resist integration.

* "They used their authority as a threat and as a means of punishment to prevent local school officials . . . to desegregate schools."

* "They have performed their own functions in such a way as to maintain and preserve the racial characteristics of the system."

LDF attorneys based their case on the successful argument that Gov. Wallace and other defendants:

* Exercised their pervasive powers to frustrate local officials who attempted to integrate schools.

* Controlled school finances and fiscal policies in a manner that maintained and promoted segregation.

* Controlled instructional programs and policies in a manner that maintained and promoted segregation.

* Controlled school construction and consolidation programs and policies in a manner that maintained and promoted segregation.

* Controlled school transportation programs and policies in a manner that maintained and promoted segregation.

LDF attorneys participating in the Case were Fred D. Grayberg, Charles H. Jones, of Montgomery; and, Mr. Green-Melvyn Zarr and Henry M. Aronson, all of New York City.

DEADLY FRIENDS

Bill Pyle and Chuck Farley, long-time friends and actors appearing with Dean Martin in Universal's "Rough Night In Jericho," saw each other for the first time in 20 years—and one friend 'killed' the other. Pyle plays a trader who is killed by Farley, a seedy buffalo hunter, in "Jericho."

FROM REEL TO REAL

Johnny Watts was having a great time portraying a tank crewman recently in Universal's "Tobruk," until he was called away. But he'll keep his tank orientation manual; he was called to active duty with the First Armored Division, U. S. Army.

Senator Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) congratulates his appointee, Walter White of 5641 Lansdowne Ave., Philadelphia, to the U.S. Capitol Police Force. White is a pre-med junior at Howard University in Washington, D.C. Senator Scott has one of the best integrated staffs in the Nation's Capitol.
