

A&T State University Gets $365,000 In Grants For Support Of Educational Programs

A&T State University has been awarded grants totaling $365,383 by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D. C., for the support of four special educational programs to be conducted at the University beginning this fall.

Receipt of the grants was announced this week by Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, president of the University. He said the funds are being made available under Title III of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Heading the list is a new project, an experimental program in curriculum development for freshman students, to be supported at a cost of $186,588. It is being conducted through the cooperation of the Institute for Services to Education.

Under the arrangement, 100 selected freshman students, representing a cross section of the entering class are to be provided specialized instruction to discover more effective methods in instruction. A special faculty to conduct the program has been selected and is now involved in planning for the project.

A second, new program aimed at improving the placement services is being supported at a cost of $8,375.

A grant of $80,420 will be utilized in continuing a cooperative program underway between A&T and the University of Wisconsin. It includes funds for faculty study, consultive services for the Schools of Engineering and Nursing, a student exchange program in which students at the University of Wisconsin and A&T exchange campuses for one year, and support for 16-visiting lecturers, experts in their field, who this year will conduct seminars in economics.

The fourth project calls for the support of 12 teaching fellows, all beyond the masters degree level, to augment A&T's faculty in English, social science, mathematics, engineering and nursing.

Record Number Attends Kappas 54th Grand Conclave In St. Louis

"Black power will appeal to the masses in larger numbers," he said, "unless public officials offer more action to help the Negro. Job opportunities, better education, housing and other needs must offer equality of access as well as opportunity."

Nothing creative is being done in race relations, Henderson said, and this is causing frustration among Negroes. Unemployment among Negroes is at the "disaster level," he said, and something must be done.

Kappas have developed young leaders through the years, he said, but cannot afford to rest on their laurels. "We must rethink our priorities," he said, "and orient our dollars and commitments to race relations in this country today."

Bradley warned that Kappas cannot "let the civil rights groups do it" while hiding "under the cloak of a social fraternity."

"We train our young men to lead," he said, "but if we ignore the angry, ominous, potentially destructive forces in our major urban cities today, we may find that they will reign as leaders, but over the ash heaps that were once our major cities."

Recalling Watts and other riots, Bradley condemned violence and "hate or separatism as a rational means of solving any problem."

"And yet," he added, "we must understand the causes of frustration, despair and bitterness which are the chemical elements which cause the explosions in our ghettos."

Howard, also a Kappa, called Black Power "the two most powerful words in the English language and also the most misunderstood."

"Economic insecurity among Negroes is the root of restlessness and uncertainty in the ghetto," he said. "Nothing is being done."

"The ghetto Negro has nothing to lose in rioting. An affluent society with status based on possession of goods can expect rioting when a substantial part of the population is cut off from the goods of this society. The ghetto Negro is isolated. He feels that he can burn, loot, smash and bomb with impunity."

This attitude is dangerous, not only to the Negro, Henderson said, but to the nation as a whole.

"Black Power is not a slogan," he said. "It is a movement dedicated to American democracy. It calls on the Negro to think for himself. It demands independent thought and grass roots action among Negroes. It seeks to bring the Negro into the mainstream of American life."

Help the Undergraduate
Gayles called on the Kappas to "return to the original goal of the fraternity—to help the undergraduate members."
