FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE 100,000 JOBS FOR HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE STUDENTS

Governor Moore today announced a special employment program to find summer jobs for 100,000 high school and college students in North Carolina.

He said, "When schools close this summer there will be many young citizens in need of gainful employment to help provide money to continue their education in the fall. We are asking that private business and industry help North Carolina by providing meaningful jobs for these deserving young men and women."

The summer employment program for students was developed in conjunction with the Governor's Council for Economic Development, the several participating State agencies and representatives of business and industry, the Governor said.

The Governor reported that the first private organization to endorse the summer employment program was the North Carolina Citizens Association, a Statewide group of business and industry leaders dedicated to sound government and a growing economy.

The Association's executive committee met in Raleigh recently and approved the Governor's request for support of the summer employment program. Officials of the organization are contacting all member companies immediately to encourage maximum participation.

J. C. Cowan, Jr. of Greensboro, president of the association, said: "The business and industrial leaders of our State recognize the importance of the Governor's request for help in providing summertime jobs for students. We at the Citizens Association will cooperate fully in requesting assistance from all our employer members."

Governor Moore commended the Association for its interest and support for the program.

He said that other public and private agencies and organizations are being contacted to help with the summer employment effort. These include numerous trade associations, regional development groups, etc. All are being urged by the Governor to give full support and encouragement to the program.

Summer jobs made available by business and industry will be listed with the North Carolina Employment Security Commission. The Commission has offices throughout the State and will work with employers and students in placement.

Chairman Henry Kendall said, "The Employment Security Commission is excited over the Governor's leadership in this drive for additional summer job opportunities for students. The need is obvious."

"Our 54 local offices and five mobile units will be happy to serve as clearing houses for their respective areas and to refer the students to available jobs most compatible with their abilities and interests. Cooperation of schools will be solicited to expedite the application process," he said.
