Three grants, totaling $8,500, were made this week to the Engineering School of A&T State University.

The American Society of Engineering Education voted to give A&T $5,000 for 10 scholarships to outstanding freshman engineering students who enter the university next fall.

The awards of $500 each are designed to help the students with their expenses and to give them more time for their studies.

The other grants included $2,500 from Union Carbide Corp. in New York City and $1,000 from Western Electric in Greensboro. The gifts were announced by J. M. Marteen, dean of administration.

A&T GETS $200,000 KELLOGG FOUNDATION GRANT

A&T State University has received a grant of $200,000 from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Michigan.

The grant, the largest single gift ever received by the university, is to be used over a four-year period in support of certain improvements envisioned for the university.

In making the grant, Kellogg officials said of A&T, "The university periodically seeks to identify its strengths and weaknesses and to devise workable methods for attack upon the recurring problems, and the four-year Foundation grant will serve to further the self-improvement efforts of this university which is one of the leaders in an important tier of public institutions of higher education."

The announcement of receipt of the grant was made at a press conference on Monday by Dr. L. C. Dowdy, president of the university. The grant had been confirmed in a letter from Dr. Gary King, associate program director of the Kellogg Foundation.

"The $200,000 gift marks a giant step in the university's campaign to raise $1 million during the next four years," said Dr. Dowdy. The drive, begun last February with a gift of $100,000 from Burlington Industries, now has to its credit more than $730,000 in cash and in commitments to be paid within four years.

Dr. Dowdy said the Kellogg funds will assist the university in accelerating its program for faculty and curriculum development, with particular emphasis in selected curricular areas and, initially, to the School of Engineering. The grant will aid in the development of the university's faculty through attendance at professional meetings and through in-service education including graduate training towards the doctorate degree.

The funds are also to be used in support of a Summer Enrichment Program for incoming freshman students in engineering and the sciences; to assist the university in preparation for its accreditation by the Engineering Council for Professional Development and to purchase equipment, supplies, books and periodicals to implement selected curricular areas.

He added that the total resources derived from the drive are to be used to supplement State appropriated funds and to care for those costs for which public funds are not available in such areas as: Scholarships for high ability, but needy students; faculty development through faculty fellowships, salary supplements, distinguished professorships and visiting scholars; faculty and student travel; program development in the purchase of new equipment, books and periodicals and special programs and consultative services and seed money for faculty research projects.
