Full Round of Activities Planned For A&T Homecoming

Planners of the annual A&T Homecoming Weekend this week released an impressive list of activities to be held for the university's students, returning alumni, and guests.

"We intend to make this the most gala event ever held in the city," said Dr. James Pendergast, chairman of the event.

A&T's Homecoming Weekend, this year, will be held Nov. 1-3. Highlight of the event, of course, will be the rough and tumble CIAA football game between the Aggies and defending champion Morgan State.

But for the hale and hearty, there will be something to do almost the entire weekend. The celebration will get underway Friday at 3 p. m. with Alumni registration in the lobby of the Memorial Student Union.

The final event will be the annual Alumni Worship service in Harrison Auditorium, Nov. 3 at 11 a. m. Speaker will be the Rev. D. G. Speller '36, pastor of St. Francis Baptist Church, Detroit, Mich.

An innovation this year will be the annual Alumni Lecture Series to be held Saturday at 10 a. m. in the main ballroom of the Memorial Union. This year's lecture will be given by Dr. Walter C. Daniel, chairman of the division of humanities at A&T.

Other events of interest to alumni include an open house at the Aggie Boosters' new "Fifth Down Club" located at Memorial Stadium, Friday at 7:30; a Continental Breakfast at Red Carpet Room, Saturday at 9 a. m.; and the President's Annual Reception after the game in the Memorial Union.

Advance tickets for the football game may be purchased at the A&T Bookstore in the Memorial Union; at booths on campus; and at the stadium on the day of the game.

Student Newspaper Wins Top Honors In National Contest

The Register, weekly student newspaper at A&T State University, has been awarded an All-American rating in the annual competition sponsored by the Associated Collegiate Press at the University of Minnesota.

The Register won the association's highest rating in competition with more than 500 student papers from colleges and universities across the nation. The entries were judged on the basis of content, writing, and makeup.

Notification of the Register's award was sent this week to Mrs. Loreno Marrow, advisor and Stanley Johnson, who served as editor-in-chief for the paper.

Role Pleases Switchboard Operator

Mrs. Vivian H. Harrison, switchboard operator at A&T State University poses at ultra-modern new console installed this week at the university. Mrs. Harrison lives at 707 Oxford Street, Greensboro.

Ever try to interview a switchboard operator while she is working? That's quite an experience, and even more of a chore if the operator is petite Mrs. Vivian H. Harrison of A&T State University.

Mrs. Harrison, one of the university's daytime operators, manages ever to keep a pleasant smile, in spite of the steady stream of calls she handles.

"I find this is interesting work," said Mrs. Harrison. "Most people don't know what operators have to go through. For one thing, you have to get used to the different types of voices. Some are pleasant and some are harsh."

Mrs. Harrison's pleasant voice punctuates the apparatus a thousand times a day with "A&T State University, may I help you?"

"No one has bothered to count the calls, but I figure I must get over 1,000 calls each day."

Mrs. Harrison spends the brief moments when one of the amber lights on the console are not flickering, handing out telegrams and special delivery mail to the countless students who troop hourly to her compartment on the first floor of the university's administration building.

A native of Siler City, N. C., Mrs. Harrison now lives in Greensboro at 707 Oxford St. She has been a switchboard operator at A&T since 1964, but prior to that she worked in the university's library.

She is a graduate of A&T with a B.S. degree in clothing. Mrs. Harrison is an accomplished designer and seamstress, but admits, "I don't have too much time for sewing now."

Mrs. Harrison first worked part-time on the switchboard when one of the operators became sick. Later she was offered the position full-time.

She is married to Clayton Harrison, a mechanic for Dixie Sales in Greensboro. Mrs. Harrison is a member of the Cathedral Choir of Trinity AME Zion Church.

Mrs. Harrison's philosophy about her job: "If you are nice to people, people will be nice to you."

FIRST REPORT MEETING FOR UNITED FUND VOLUNTEERS HELD

MOSE KISER, JR.

The initial results of the work of some 2,000 United Fund volunteers will be learned Thursday at the first report meeting of the 1969 United Fund Campaign for the Greater Greensboro Area.

Mose Kiser Jr., campaign general chairman, said all campaign volunteers are invited to attend the report meeting to be held at the Stalter-Hilton on West Market Street.

Campaign reports will be taken until noon to be tallied by auditors. The meeting will start at 12:30 p. m. with a luncheon sponsored by 17 business firms which sponsor all meals held in connection with United Fund campaigns.

Campaign officials report that many business firms and
