PLANNERS, FARM LEADERS TO ATTEND A&T LECTURES

A unique series of seminars at A&T State University will explore ways of getting the best use of available land.

The conference will get underway Thursday, October 24, with a discussion by Forrest Steele, soil scientist with the U. S. Soil Conservation Service in Raleigh, N. C.

Steele will address a group of city and county planners and agriculture leaders at noon in the auditorium of Carver Hall. His topic will be "Soil Surveys: The Key to Environmental Planning."

Other seminars will be held October 31, November 7, and 14, and December 5 and 12. All programs will consist of an address, followed by a question and answer period.

Steele has been with the Soil Conservation Service since 1935. A native of Brookville, Pa., he holds the B.S. degree from the Pennsylvania State University.

He has written widely on soil information, soil classification, and land use and is a member of the American Society of Agronomy, the Soil Science Society of America and the Soil Conservation Society of America.

Other speakers who will take part on the programs are C. L. Hunt, assistant soil scientist; John Wiggins, woodland conservationist; and W. W. Stevens, state soil conservationist, all from Raleigh.

Also taking part in the seminars will be Henry W. Robertson, work unit soil conservationist from Greensboro. Coordinating the programs are J. W. R. Grandy, instructor of horticulture at A&T, and Dr. Samuel J. Dunn, chairman of the department of plant science.

PTSA Plans Membership Drive

The Dudley High School PTSA has made plans for increasing the membership and for presenting a very effective program for the year, 1968-1969.

The first meeting was held in the auditorium Monday night, September 30. Mr. Pershing Wall, out-going president, presided. A special ovation was given Mr. Wall because of his dedicated service in the PTSA.

The new officers for the two-year period were named. They were Mr. J. LaFayette Morgan, president; Mr. Eugene Pinnix, first vice-president; Mr. Soloman Allen, second vice-president; Mrs. E. F. Robinson, secretary;

Mrs. Marteena Wooten, assistant secretary, and Mrs. Eugene Pinnix, treasurer.

Several important reports were made, but the main stress was placed on methods of getting parents interested in the school's program. Some persons were named to the Membership Committee. They were: Mrs. Luella Graves, chairman; Mr. Andrew Jones, Mrs. Eula Hudgins, Mr. L. V. Lassiter, Mrs. Pauline Lowe, Mr. James C. Ray, Mr. Luther Manning, Mr. C. T. Soloman, Mrs. Evelyn Robinson and Mrs. L. C. Milling. The Membership Committee
