

BAHA'I ACTIVE IN HUMAN RIGHTS PASSES AT AGE 103

Dr. Nettie J. Asberry, a Baha'i of Tacoma, Washington since 1945, passed to the Abb'a Kingdom on November 17, at the age of 103. Dr. Asberry was the northwest founder of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and from the time of her arrival in Tacoma from Kansas in 1893, she was active in cultural affairs, particularly in the area of music. She is believed to have been one of the first Negro women to receive the doctor's degree, which was earned at the Kansas State Conservatory of Music.

She became one of the best-known music teachers in her area and for many years presented a class of 45 or more pupils in recital each year. Shortly before her death, Dr. Asberry donated musical instruments and library materials for a music hall that is to be named in her honor.

Dr. Asberry was also active in social work, especially among young persons and women, and was well known as a steadfast seeker of equality and peace.

EVEN WITH TWO SQUEAKERS, AGGIES ROLL IN CIAA PLAY

Ingham scored nine points and muscled four tough rebounds to spark the Aggies' rally. "I am really glad he came through for us," said Irvin, "because it will give him the confidence he needs."

High scoring Daryle Cherry again led A&T's scoring with 16 points. He was followed by freshman Elmer Austin with 14 points. At Elizabeth City, the Aggies nearly pulled the upset of the season, that is until they blew an 18-point lead in the second period.

With Daryle Cherry popping away, A&T took a 34-25 half-time margin. The Aggies continued their high powered attack in the second half and stretched their lead to 18 points, before the Vikings began a sensational comeback that earned them the victory.

With Israel Oliver and Hubert Moorer doing most of the scoring, Elizabeth City sewed up the win. A&T's first loss of the season nullified a fine 41-point effort by Cherry, easily the outstanding star of the game.

DETROIT SCOPE MAGAZINE EXAMINES WHAT WE'RE DOING TO KEEP OUR CHILDREN OUT OF RACISM

"Since the beginning of the black revolution, black demands and tactics have brought about many reactions from the white population in the U. S. One of the most significant of those reactions may turn out to be the indictment of white society for the current racial friction. In the Kerner Commission Report on Civil Disorders and other studies conducted by predominantly white groups, white racism was defined as the chief enemy of racial peace. These studies seem to agree with Martin Luther King's conclusion that 'The American People are Infected with Racism'."

How white groups and individuals have begun to combat racism before it begins in white children is explored in an article by Jim Ingram in the February 8th issue of Detroit Scope magazine.

Ingram details how some programs to broaden children's contact with racial minorities—on both the public and parochial school levels—are well received and how others have met parental opposition.

"Many black militant students feel that the public school system is offering 'Too little, too late and not enough black.'

"Children, as natural mimics, pick up their parents' prejudices. The concept that 'Somebody who is different from me is not inferior to me' must be taught early," Ingram writes.
