Greensboro Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses Hold Meeting

According to Mr. Howard, local presiding minister of the Greensboro Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, the convention held in Greensboro, N. C. on February 14-16 was an overwhelming success, with a peak attendance on Sunday afternoon of 677. Mr. Howard stated that the theme of the convention, "Make Wise Use of the Remaining Time," was emphasized throughout, with talks, practical demonstrations and scriptural references.

He stated further, "Even though there was a large crowd there each day, there was no need for any police patrolling or guards, because everyone was interested in learning from the Bible, God's way of peace and no one even spoke harshly in any way."

The highlight of the assembly came on Sunday afternoon when the district supervisor of Jehovah's Witnesses, Mr. C. G. Thompson, delivered the talk, "Law and Order, When and How." He stated, "Many humans today advocate law and order only for self-protection or obey the law out of fear; indications are that pressure on everyone will be greater in the future, because lawlessness and disorder are increasing at an alarming rate."

In closing he said, "The conclusion of the matter is that law and order are possible; within this generation, God will produce such earth wide. It will exceed the imagination of all of us today."

Mr. Howard, local presiding minister, invites all interested persons to attend the Kingdom Hall at 2401 Everette Street. All meetings are free.

Workshop Set To Begin At Y.W.C.A. Southeast Branch

A two-day Workshop in Creative Stitchery, or Weaving Without a Loom, will be offered at the YWCA, Southeast Branch on Tuesday, Feb. 25 and March 4, at 7:00 p. m. Students will learn how to weave tote bags, pillows, and other articles.

Dr. Phyllis Danielson, currently teaching in the Art Department at UNC-G will conduct the workshop. Dr. Danielson is a former YWCA Adult Program Director and teacher in adult education programs, public schools and universities in Michigan and Indiana. Her own artistic expression finds an outlet in the texture and color of stitchery wall hangings.

A&T Steps Up Interest In Solving Urban Concerns

by Richard E. Moore

One of the concerns at the last meeting of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges was that member institutions become more involved in the challenges of the urban crisis.

From its beginning, A&T State University has had this commitment to serve all segments of the population. But in recent years, the administration, faculty and students have stepped up their efforts in public service. The university's commendable commitment to its community was recently cited in a nationwide article by the Associated Press. The article, written by Carven Hudgins, AP education writer, mentioned A&T, along with Columbia University and Rutgers, the state university of New Jersey, as having prototypes of the urban-oriented universities.

In the report, A&T president Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy said:

"The involvement of A&T in the community has come about, not through an attempt at window dressing, but of necessity, since the university has been so long a vital part of Greensboro. A&T has shown an exceptional sense of its involve-
