PEARL BAILEY RETURNS TO FILMS WITH CO-STARRING ROLE

Pearl Bailey returns to motion pictures with a co-starring role in "The Landlord," Mirisch-Cartier II comedy which goes into production June 2 in New York with Norman Jewison producing and Hal Ashby directing. Beau Bridges will play the title-role in the story of a white, rich and whimsical owner of a tenement in a black ghetto. The film will be released by United Artists, an entertainment service of Transamerica Corporation.

Marking her first screen appearance in almost a decade Miss Bailey will portray Marge, one of Bridges' tenants. She will continue starring on Broadway in "Hello, Dolly!" during the shooting of the film, appearing in both the movie and play for at least five weeks.

Long one of America's favorite entertainers, Miss Bailey is a star of films ("Carmen Jones" and "St. Louis Woman"), television, nightclubs and records. But her current engagement in "Hello, Dolly!" is perhaps her greatest triumph, earning her enormous public and critical acclaim and numerous citations and awards, in-

'Pennies' from the Poor Basis of New Project At A&T

GREENSBORO, N. C. — Nobody has much respect for pennies anymore, but the organizer of a new project at A&T State University believes the copper-colored coins may be a key to solving an important problem in the ghetto.

The Consumer Education Council, directed by B. W. Harris, is asking residents of low-income areas to "save at least a penny a day."

"The idea is to get the people of the neighborhoods involved," said Harris. "When we are strong enough, we want to establish a credit union and make loans available to low-income persons who cannot qualify for some of the other loans."

"If we can get 1,000 persons to save one cent per day, we can have something like $36,000 plus interest in a year's time," he added.

The Consumer Council, composed primarily of low-income persons who pay a $1.00 membership dues, issues weekly tiny slotted banks called "Penny Savers."

As soon as the banks are filled, the funds are deposited in an account in a Greensboro bank.

"There is a real need for this program," stated Harris, who is also chairman of the Department of Adult Education and Community Service at A&T. "Studies show that about 15 per cent of the families in Guilford County earn less than $3,000 per year."

The Council also will conduct demonstrations on buying clothing and groceries and on obtaining credit. Many of the demonstrations will be held in community recreation centers and in meeting rooms within housing projects. Other sessions will be held on the A&T campus.

Harris feels these demonstrations will be a big service to the Council members.

"Without having transportation to go to the larger chain stores, many persons in low income areas walk to neighborhood stores and are often charged more for their groceries," he said.

So far, the new project has received favorable response in the Greensboro area. Harris sees the Consumer Council only as a means to an end.

"We want to do something for ourselves and keep the money in the communities," he said. "We will be glad to work ourselves out of a job."

Veterans released from active duty after January 1955 must complete GI Bill education by May 31, 1974, or eight years after discharge, whichever is later.
