CALM RETURNS TO A&T CAMPUS; SUMMER SCHOOL TO OPEN JUNE 9

Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, president of North Carolina A&T State University, which was abruptly closed last Friday because of campus unrest, announced Monday that the students will not be requested to return to the campus for final examinations.

Other scheduled activities, including the baccalaureate-commencement convocation on June 1 and Summer School, which begins on June 9, will be held.

"In a meeting this morning," said Dr. Dowdy, "the academic deans voted to forego final examinations at this time. The students will be graded by averaging all marks earned up to May 22. We feel that this system will be the most equitable solution of the problem in this emergency."

Dr. Dowdy added that in cases where students appeal, examinations will be administered next September.

The situation at A. & T. stemmed from several days of student demonstrations at nearby Dudley High School in the city. Some A. & T. students had joined Dudley students in the demonstrations.

On Wednesday night about 10 p. m., police reported some rock throwing incidents on Market Street, near the campus. Police arrived on the scene and ushered students back to the campus. Later that night, there were reports of weapons being fired from the campus and police returned the fire. A sophomore student, Willie E. Grimes was shot during this time.
