Army captain, he has been associated with Humble since 1961, after holding positions with Johnson Publishing Company and the Urban League in Philadelphia.

Queen Promoted To National Community Relations Post At Humble Oil Co.

HOUSTON—James E. Queen has been promoted to national coordinator of community relations in the corporate public relations headquarters at Humble Oil & Refining Company. His office has been transferred from Rockefeller Plaza, New York City, to the Humble Building, Houston.

In his new position, Queen holds nationwide responsibility for the panning and initiation of a variety of community relations programs and activities in Humble's public relations department.

On many matters, such as promotion of equal opportunity employment and enlightened customer relations, he will also act as consultant to the Humble marketing organization.

Mr. Queen, 39, is an assistant director of public relations for the Elks national organization. He is a charter member of the National Association of Market Developers' chapter in New York City, where he served successive terms as treasurer, president and chairman of the board.

A 32nd degree Mason, Prince Hall Affiliate, he is public relations advisor to the New York State Masonic Grand Lodge.

A former Army captain, Mr. Queen won the Bronze Star Medal with "V" and cluster while serving in Korea.

After the service, he was employed for three years as a field representative for Johnson Publishing Company. He was then appointed to a position as public relations staff associate with the Philadelphia Urban League. After four years, he took a position with Humble's marketing staff.

Beginning as a sales trainee in 1961 for Humble in the combustion equipment and heating oil division at Bala Cynwyd, Pennsylvania, he has since progressed through statewide, regional and national public relations assignments in Philadelphia and New York City.

A native of Parkersburg, West Virginia, he attended St. Joseph's College, Temple University, and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He specialized in communications, sociology and public relations.

Mr. Queen resides in the Timbercrest section of Houston with his wife, the former Miss Eddy Mayo of Cumberland, Virginia, and their three children, Sheree Lynn, 11, James III, 8, and Derek, 2. They had formerly lived in Teaneck, New Jersey and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

NCC AUDIENCE HEARS MCKISSICK

DURHAM, N. C. — Floyd B. McKissick, developer of Soul City in Warren County, said Friday at North Carolina College's annual Awards Day ceremonies that the people who oppose Soul City are the ones who opposed him in North Carolina when he was fighting "to achieve what some people call integration."

McKissick said he thought it strange that the forces who opposed integration now oppose the concept of "a black city for black people."

"I think there are people who will oppose anything because someone proposes it," McKissick said.

McKissick described what he called "the semantics of racism—the language the man uses to divide and conquered." He said the word "separatist" is an example of this language, used to attack any movement which inspires black pride. "The real separatists are those white people who years ago moved to the suburbs with the money they got out of Harlem."

McKissick warned NCC's academic award winners that they "shouldn't think they are any better than anyone else. The white man is convinced that you are just like the rest of us unfortunate blacks."

"You are black whether you got an award or not. But if you are black and gifted, then it is your duty to contribute more to your less fortunate brothers and sisters."

"An award doesn't mean that you have it made. It merely gives evidence that you have acquired certain skills and it doesn't mean that you know exactly what to do with those skills after you get out of school."

McKissick said education can "separate black people from black people," and warned the students that education may be mis-education.

He urged the students to seek financial independence as a route to power. "Power cannot be attained without bread," McKissick said.

It Takes Guts For Students To Labor In Ghetto

In an age when student unrest is rampant on the nation's campuses, it takes GUTS to be good.

GUTS, in this instance is the Greensboro United Tutorial Service, a student organization with the objectives of improving life in the low-income areas of this city.

More than 112 A&T students, plus others from four area colleges are involved in the seven-year old program.

Typical of the public-service minded students in the program is sophomore Rosa Bright of Hamlet, N. C. "I get a real satisfaction from working in this program," said Miss Bright, who is training at A&T for a career in home economics extension work.

"The University should be more involved in the community," added Miss Bright. "After all, we live here in Greensboro nine months of the year. This is our home while we are here and we should certainly know what is going on around us."

Although carrying a full class load in college, Miss Bright spends one evening per week and every Saturday morning tutoring youngsters.

On Thursday evening, she works with a small group of students in the White Oaks Community Center in East Greensboro. During the Saturday session, she assists in tutoring several youngsters in a classroom at the University.

Advisor for the A&T segment of GUTS is Mrs. Anne Graves, an assistant professor of education and psychology at A&T.

Mrs. Graves, who works closely with tutors, stressed the fact that the program is "completely voluntary."

"We are not funded," added Mrs. Graves, noting that GUTS grew out of a concern by former N. C. Governor Terry Sanford that the youth of the state were not being involved enough.

Before being given an assignment, the GUTS volunteers are given a two-week training period at the University. Throughout the school year, the tutors

NEW YORK — Arthur J. Goldberg, President of the American Jewish Committee, today linked the first anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s death to the Jewish Passover, which the former Supreme Court Justice termed "our own dedication to human freedom." The Passover holiday started Thursday, April 3, and continues through April 10.

In a statement marking the year since Dr. King's assassination on April 4, 1968, Mr. Goldberg said that the American Jewish Committee joined "with all other Americans, black and white, Christian and Jew, in its ongoing support for the America of Martin Luther King's dream—a land of full and equal opportunity for black Americans and white, in a nation united and at peace with itself and its neighbors."

The full statement by Mr. Goldberg follows:

"One year ago today, on April 4, 1968, the American people learned with shock and disbelief of the brutal killing of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.—that giant spirit whose ringing articulation of the dream of equal justice for all men galvanized the conscience of our nation during the last decade.

"In the wake of that great tragedy, which impoverished all Americans regardless of color or creed, many individuals and groups vowed renewed dedication to the cause that Dr. King so ably led.

"That dedication must, and shall, continue, despite the repeated crises that have rent so many of our cities and divided our people during the past 12 months. The American Jewish Committee, during this Passover week in which we celebrate our own dedication to human freedom, joins with all other Americans, black and white, Christian and Jew, in its ongoing support for the America of Martin Luther King's dream—a land of full and equal opportunity for black Americans and white, in a nation united and at peace with itself and its neighbors."

hold "feedback" sessions on the campus to discuss their problems and experiences.

Mrs. Graves said that besides providing academic tutoring, the A&T students also get involved in the cultural and social life of the communities in which they work.

The volunteers themselves chaperone youngsters to movies and on shopping trips downtown and entertain with a Halloween Party and a Christmas Party at the local Hayes - Taylor YMCA.

VETERANS CORNER

Editor's Note: Below are authoritative answers by the Veterans Administration to some of the many current questions from former servicemen and their families. Further information on veterans benefits may be obtained at any VA office.

Q—I enrolled in college this spring under the G. I. Bill and intend to re-enter the same school and take the same course of study this fall. Must I tell the Veterans Administration about my fall enrollment plans?

A—Before the end of your present enrollment period you will receive a certification of attendance card from the VA. The primary purpose of this card is to confirm the training for which you have been paid an educational assistance allowance. However, the card also has a section relating to re-enrollment plans. By completing this section you will help VA anticipate your future educational assistance allowance needs.

Q—What are the maximum charges allowed by the Veterans Administration on a G. I. loan?

A—The veteran-borrower is permitted to pay reasonable closing costs customarily paid by borrowers in home mortgage financing. These include fees or charges for VA appraisal of the home, credit report, survey (if required by the lender), title evidence, recording fees and a lender's origination fee not to exceed one per cent of the loan amount instead of any other fees for the lender's services. The initial installments of such recurring expenses as property taxes and hazard insurance must also be paid at the time the loan is closed. In addition, a veteran separated from service after Jan. 31, 1955, must pay a statutory fee of one-half of one per cent of the loan amount. This is a one-time payment which may be included in the loan amount.
