

WELFARE RECIPIENTS TO BE GIVEN JOB TRAINING

Atlanta, Georgia — Some 1,680 persons on welfare in North Carolina will be given job and training incentives through a new Work Incentive Program (WIN), according to William

U. Norwood, regional manpower administrator, U. S. Department of Labor. $1,122,023 in Federal funds has been allocated for the project.

Exempt from the referral are:
1. The sick, the incapacitated, and the elderly.

2. Those who live too far away from a WIN center to make participation practical.

3. Persons whose continuous presence in the home is required because of illness or incapacity of another member of the household.

4. Full-time students from welfare homes.

The program is being funded under provisions of Social Security Act amendments enacted in early 1968.

A&T GRADUATE RECEIVES GRADUATE SCHOOL FELLOWSHIP

Princeton, N. J. — The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation announced this week the award of Martin Luther King, Jr. Fellowships to sixty-two Black ex-servicemen and one former WAC corporal. The fellowships provide full support over two years for graduate and professional study leading to careers in service to the nation and the community. In addition, twenty-one additional grants were made to students who had partial support from other sources.

26-year-old Harvey Newton, of Route 4, Greenville, N. C., a graduate of North Carolina A&T State University was awarded Pre-Medical at Haverford College in Pennsylvania.

According to Raymond Richardson, Director of the King Program, "whether the cry is for community control or increased participation in local institutions, it is clear that trained Black leadership is desperately needed. Everybody from the Black Panthers to the nation's leading graduate and professional schools and industries recognizes veterans as a group of great promise and potential for leadership training."

King Fellowships at $270 a month supplement G.I. benefits, over and above tuition which is absorbed by the graduate or professional school attended. The combined monthly minimum income of $400 offers a real option for additional training rather than immediate employment. The largest group of King Fellows, eighteen, will be studying law; thirteen are in social work and related fields, and five are preparing for careers in business administration. Among other fields of study are education, medicine, architecture, psychology, and the sciences. The King Fellows will be attending 49 universities from Harvard and Columbia to Berkeley and the University of Arkansas.

The former WAC corporal, Mrs. Margaret Jones of Tucson, Arizona, is also the widow of a serviceman and the mother of two teen-agers. At present employed as a social worker in the VA hospital in Tucson, Mrs. Jones will use her fellowship for doctoral study in social psychology at the University of Arizona. Another King Fellow, James H. Rogers of St. Louis, is writing his doctoral dissertation on "The Black Experience in Contemporary Afro-American Literature." James O. Chafers, who is studying architecture at the University of Michigan, is working on a long range master plan to be proposed to the Detroit City Planning Commission. Guy Ruth, a welfare worker for the City of New York, where he "witnessed much suffering, particularly among my Black brothers and sisters," will study psychology to be able to help the mentally ill. Earl Garrett, Jr. of Montclair, New Jersey, is preparing for dentistry, a field with few Black practitioners. Joshua Bursh, of Phoenix, Arizona, is completing his law studies specializing in corporation law with emphasis on developing businesses with Black ownership.

The King Program, now in its second year, is funded by major grants from the Rockefeller and Sloan Foundations, with additional funds from the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U.S. and the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company. Information about the program can be had from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, Box 642, Princeton, N.J.
